2 die in plane crash

BERNIE—The crash of a two-passenger plane a quarter mile east of Bernie resulted in the deaths of two young Bernie men Sunday, according to the highway patrol.

Pronounced dead at the scene were the pilot, Reuben DeWayne Owens, 20, and Norman Fred Winchester, his 19-year-old passenger.

Witnesses told authorities that the single-engine Taylorcraft plane owned by Owens went into a tailspin and crashed in a field near Route V at 3:20 p.m.

The crash was investigated by the highway patrol, the Stoddard County Sheriff's Department and Bernie police.

Further investigation by Federal Aviation Administration authorities from Cape Girardeau was expected at the scene today.

Owens was born Nov. 7, 1955 at Kennett to Reuben Earl and Reba Ann Henson Owens, of Bernie, who survive.

He was employed as a spray pilot and truck driver.

In addition to his parents, he is survived by two brothers, Buford Dwight and Michael Douglas Owens of the home; and one sister, Melanie Ann Owens, of the home.

Friends may call after 5 p.m. Tuesday at Duffie-Rainey Funeral Home in Bernie, where services will be held at 1 p.m. Wednesday with the Rev. Joe Masters of Bernie officiating.

Burial will follow in the Bernie Cemetery.

Winchester was born June 9, 1956 at Poplar Bluff to Norman Earl and Wilda Bowman Winchester of Bernie, who survive.

Other survivors include: one brother, Gary Wayne Blocker, two sisters, Debbie Reece and Tcheanina Winchester of Bernie; his maternal grandparents, H. R. and Norma Bowman of Bernie; and his paternal grandmother, Mrs. Ethel Winchester of Bernie.

Friends may call after 6 p.m. today at Duffie-Rainey Funeral Home, where services are scheduled at 2 p.m. Tuesday with the Rev. Arlon Ayers of Bernie officiating.

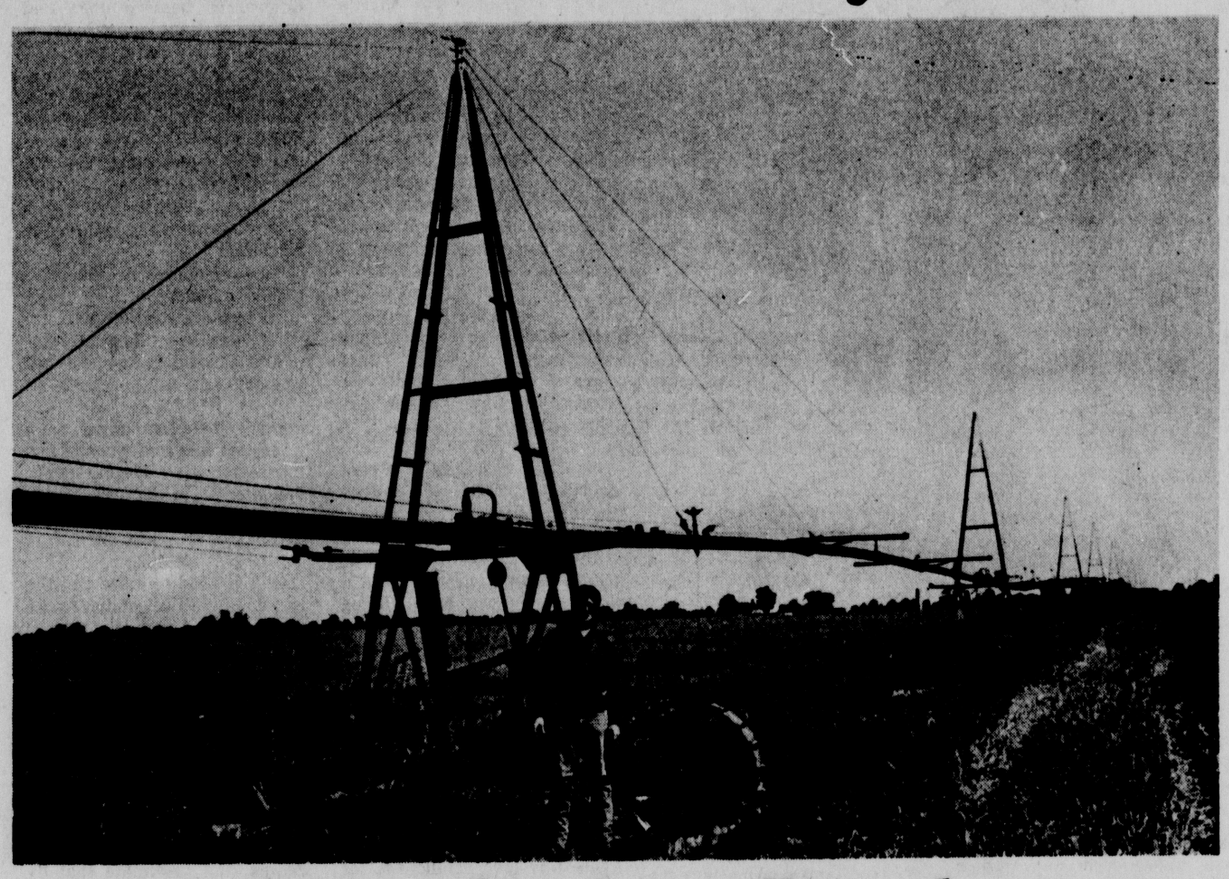

Burial will follow in the Bernie Cemetery.

Value Day to feature coupons again

Another special promotion has been announced as part of this month's Sikeston Value Day Wednesday.

Registration coupons appearing on the front page of the special Value Day Section of Tuesday's edition of The Daily Standard will enable shoppers to register for free gifts to be awarded by participating stores.

A mass drawing will be held at 2 p.m. Saturday at Kingsway Plaza Mall to choose the winners of valuable merchandise and cash awards. The winner does not have to be present at the drawing.

A rainmaker that really works

John Byrd of Bertrand Route One stands near an irrigation system on his farm northeast of Sikeston. Called the Valley irrigation system, the structure is 1,215 feet long, has 11 towers and rotates on a pivot point midway in the system. Spraying at the rate of 11 gallons per minute from each outlet, the huge sprinkler takes 60 hours to make a complete circuit around the field, laying down the equivalent of 1.2 inches of rain. Due to below normal rainfall, the system has already been in use this spring. (Daily Standard photo)

Church going all out for upset victory

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) — Sen. Frank Church of Idaho, hoping to win his first presidential primary, shook hands with workers entering the state Capitol this morning as he sought an upset over Jimmy Carter in the Nebraska Democratic primary Tuesday.

Church spent the weekend campaigning in churches and taverns, asking for support from backers of candidates who have withdrawn from the race.

Church said that with united support he could score "a stunning upset" that could be the "springboard" to later campaign victories.

Nebraska's Democratic presidential ballot carries the names of 11 candidates including Sens. Hubert Humphrey and Edward Kennedy, who unsuccessfully tried to have their names removed.

President Ford faces Ronald Reagan in their race for the Republican nomination in Nebraska and in West Virginia the same day. Democrats vote in both states and in Connecticut.

After weekend GOP caucuses and conventions in five states, Ronald Reagan pushed past the one-third mark in his drive for the 1,130 national convention delegates that would give him the Republican prdsidential nomination.

The former California governor had 396 delegates to 309 for President Ford. In addition, 347 uncommitteed GOP delegates had been selected.

On the Democratic side, Carter picked up additional delegates in Maine and Wyoming to reach a total of 569. Washington Sen. Henry M. Jackson, who announced an end to his active campaigning a week ago, had 199 delegates and Arizona Rep. Morris K. Udall 187.5 delegate votes.

In addition, 281.5 uncommitted Democratic delegates have been elected.

President Ford spent the weekend campaigning in Nebraska and Missouri, seeking to regain the lead in Republican delegate strength. He was back at the White House on Sunday. Aides said he would campaign in his home state, Michigan, on Wednesday, and there were reports he would work there Saturday as well.

Reagan spent Sunday in Los Angeles.

Church has concentrated on Nebraska since entering the Democratic race several weeks ago, and he hurried from town to town over the weekend in an effort to round up support.

The Idaho senator was a late starter because he was busy as chairman of the Senate intelligence committee.

Carter has predicted a victory in Nebraska, though he has said he is behind in Maryland where he faces still another newcomer, California Gov. Edmund Brown Jr.

Ford and Reagan are on the Republican ballot in West Virginia. On the Democratic side, Senate Majority Whip Robert C. Byrd is entered as a favorite son candidate against Alabama Gov. George Wallace.

In other weekend campaign development:

—California Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. said Sunday that he would meet with uncommitted convention delegate candidates in New Jersey on May 18, the same day as the Maryland primary, in an effort to win their backing. He also scheduled a brief campaign swing for Wednesday in Colorado, where his supporters set up a campaign headquarters on Sunday.

—Rep. Morris Udall, scolding President Ford for not promptly approving a new Federal Election Commission, was in Connecticut to campaign until the final hours before that state's primary on Tuesday. Udall was the only one of the five candidates in the race scheduled to stump the state today.

At a Sunday rally at the Yale University Law School, the Arizona congressman accused Ford of delaying approval of a new commission so his Democratic and Republican opponents would have less campaign money for the May 18 Michigan primaries.

Also entered in Connecticut's primary are Carter, Sen. Henry Jackson of Washington, antiabortionist candidate Ellen McCormack of New York, Church and former Oklahoma Sen. Fred Harris.

—Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey, D-Minn., said Sunday he would be ready and willing to serve if called on to be the Democratic presidential nominee.

"I'm not out of the presidential race any more than I ever was. And I'm not in more than I was," Humphrey said Sunday on ABC's "Issues and Answers."

Humphrey said he could decide after the primaries end June 8 whether to make an active bid for the nomination.

7 persons injured in area traffic accidents

Seven persons were injured — three seriously — in five area traffic accidents Sunday, the state highway patrol announced today.

A one-car accident on Highway 62 five miles west of Lilbourn resulted in moderate injuries to Louie Doublin, 28, and Ralph Doublin, 22, both of Mound City, Ill., passengers in an eastbound car driven by William E. Doublin, 16, of Dongola, Ill.

According to the patrol, the accident occurred at 12:45 a.m. when the Doublin car ran off the road on a curve and overturned.

The injury victims were taken to Missouri Delta Community Hospital for treatment.

A second one-car accident, at 11 a.m. on Highway 160 six miles west of Doniphan, resulted in serious injuries to Paul R. Sorrell, 26, of Doniphan.

The accident occurred when Sorrell lost control of the car he was driving, which ran off the road and struck a tree. The impact caused Sorrell to be thrown from the vehicle.

Sorrell was taken to Ripley County Hospital in Doniphan for treatment.

James Kenneth Skaggs, 19, of Annapolis received minor injuries in a two-vehicle accident at 1:20 p.m. on Highway 49 in Annapolis.

The accident occurred when the northbound car Skaggs was driving collided head on with a southbound car driven by Dwight Ralph Johnson, 20, of Annapolis. The accident occurred in the southbound lane.

Skaggs was taken to Arcadia Valley Hospital in Pilot Knob for treatment.

A car-motorcycle accident at 4:10 p.m. on the Markum Springs access road three miles south of Williamsville resulted in moderate injuries to Gary P. Bratton, 19, of Williamsville, driver of the motorcycle, and caused serious injuries to a passenger on the motorcycle, Bradley Marler, 19, of Poplar Bluff.

6 persons hurt in 2 Charleston accidents

CHARLESTON — Six persons were injured in two traffic accidents Saturday, police said today

Two persons were injured in a three-vehicle chain reaction accident at 12:51 p.m. Saturday at the intersection of Interstate 57 and Highway 60-62.

Police said a car driven west by John Corsiglia, 28, of Elk Grove, Ill., on Highway 60-62 struck the back of a westbound car driven by Lenora Shultz, 56, of Canton, Ky., forcing her car into the back of a westbound car driven by Lewis Matthew, 28 of South Bend, Ind. The Shultz car and the Matthew car were stopped in a left-turn lane to go south on Interstate 57.

Letha Matthew, 30, of South Bend, a passenger in the Matthew car, and the Shultz woman were taken to Missouri Delta Community Hospital in Sikeston. The extent of their injuries was not recorded.

At 6:33 p.m. Saturday at the intersection of Cypress and Stark streets, a two-car collision caused injuries to four persons.

Claudia Francis Riley, 67, of Wyatt, driving south on Start Street, and passengers Mary Riley, 68, of Wyatt, Angela Riley, 6, and Jeffrey Riley, 9, of 303 Byrd St., Charleston, were injured when Riley's car struck a car driven west on Cypress Street by Robert James Dugan Jr., 19, of Wyatt.

Police said Dugan stated he did not know if Riley had stopped for the stop sign or if he had just pulled into the intersection.

The injured were taken to Missouri Delta Community Hospital in Sikeston. The seriousness of the injuries were not recorded.

KC mayor joins race for Senate

KANSAS CITY — Charles B. Wheeler Jr., mayor of Kansas City, announces his candidacy for the Democratic nomination for the U.S. Senate in the Aug. 3 primary election.

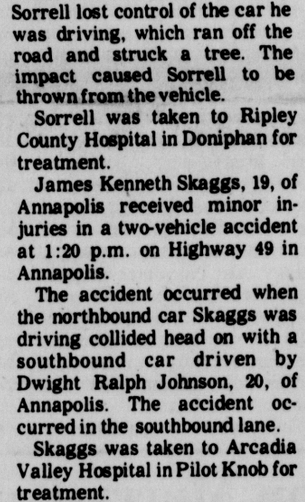

At press conferences in Jefferson City, St. Louis and Kansas City, the mayor has thrown out a challenge to the other contenders for the seat of retiring Sen. Stuart Symington to stand up and be counted on several statewide and national issues.

Wheeler, 49, now serving his second four-year term as mayor, also served four years in the executive branch of Jackson County government.

"The voters of Missouri need to have all the vital issues discussed. The best way to get that done is by open debate," he said. "My experice has been with open door government. If open debate occurs, the people will respond by electing the most intelligent man to the office."

Wheeler said his opponents have the backing of labor leaders, who condone illegal strikes by public service employes. In addition, he noted that Reps. James Symington and Jerry Litton had voted for the Common Situs Picketing Bill which was later vetoed by President Gerald R. Ford.

Wheeler has been outspoken in his criticism of certain labor leaders since the 1975 firefighters' strike in Kansas City. He thinks such union leadership would bankrupt our cities and "bankruptcy of our large cities can lead to backruptcy of the nation."

In December 1975, Wheeler sponsored and saw passed a resolution at the convention of the National League of Cities. The resolution called for the study of a task force which could be made available to cities left without fire protection by illegal firemen's strikes. The Central Labor Council of Greater Kansas City responded by withdrawing their support of Wheeler.

Wheeler said he "feels qualified to meet any candidate on any issue. This will not be a one-issue campaign."

2 cited in truck pull incident

PORTAGEVILLE — A truck pulling contest involving 15 or more trucks and between 35 and 40 men that was staged on private property about 10 p.m. Sunday caused a called meeting of the City Council and two Portageville men have been cited for creating a public nuisance.

Police Chief Joe Moore said citations were issued against John Wayne Johnson, 29, of Portageville Route Two and William O. Hobbs, 28, of Portageville.

The truck-pulling contests have been occurring regularly on Sunday nights for the past two months, according to Moore, on the grounds of Leroy Oil Co. located on Highway 61 North, without the permission of the owner, Leroy Musgraves.

When the police received complaints Sunday night they went to the scene and told the men to unchain the trucks and disperse. The men became argumentative and stated they wanted to meet with the City Council.

Mayor Don Rone was notified and he called a meeting of the council. The council told the men it was the duty of the police department to enforce the law and it was leaving the matter up to the police.

Moore said that the complaints had been made by the cooks at Billy Fisher's Steak House near the oil company, who told the police they were afraid the trucks were going to ram into the restaurant building.

Moore said that the department had received several complaints earlier about the incidents but citizens were reluctant to sign complaints.

Both Fisher and Musgraves, Moore said, did not want to sign complaints because many of the men involved were business customers.

When no one would sign a complaint, or the council did not instruct him to stop the truck pulling Sunday night, Moore said he told the men if they wanted to pull the trucks, "Go on back down there and pull." He said the men went back to the oil company but didn't do any more truck pulling.

James E. Ray appeal denied

CINCINNCATI (AP) — James Earl Ray's appeal from his plea of guilty in the shooting death of civil rights leader Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. was denied today by the 6th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals.

The unanimous decision concluded that the U.S. District Court for the western district of Tennessee was correct in refusing Ray's motion for a new trial.

Cash taken in weekend thefts

Several thefts were reported to the Sikeston Police Department over the weekend.

Mearl Masters, 131 N. Handy, reported that he was robbed of $1,200 about midnight Saturday in front of the Wagon Wheel Tavern, 841 W. Malone Ave. Masters told police he had been drinking with three other men and discovered the theft the next morning.

Walter Kearbey Jr., 839 Matthews Ave., reported that five Negroes jumped him Saturday morning at the corner of Maude and Handy streets and took his billfold and $168. Kearbey was unable to describe four of his attackers, but said the fifth was of medium build, had a natural hairstyle and wore a green vest and green pants.

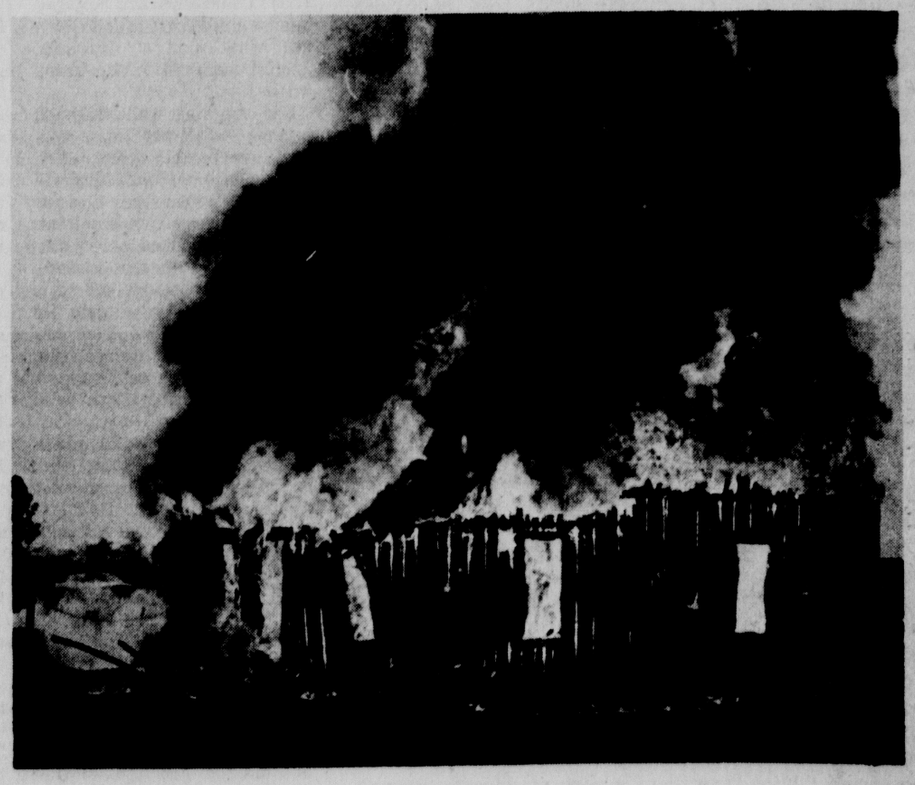

Carl Basinger, 1401 E. Gladys St., reported the theft of approximately $80 cash from a cash register at the West Side Shell Service Station on West Malone Avenue about 5 p.m. Saturday.

Linne Scally of Morehouse reported the theft of a cassette tape player and tape and a tool box full of tools from his pickup while it was parked in front of the Sand Lounge parking lot. The theft occurred between 9 p.m. Saturday and 1 a.m. Sunday.

Gary Hilburn, 810 W. Gladys, reported the theft of an undetermined amount of cash from the game room at Scott Manor Apartments Saturday. Two pinball machines were broken into and the money taken from them.

Glenn Holt, 103 Second St., reported the theft of a citizen's band radio and tape player with FM converter from a car owned by Ervin Johnson of Bell City parked in front of Holt's residence. The stolen items wer valued at $238. The theft occurred Friday afternoon or Saturday morning.

Louis Jimerson, owner of Jimerson's Place, 108 Luther St., reported that his establishment was broken into Friday or Saturday. Three machines were damaged and about $13 in change was taken from a juke box.

Fire destroys rural home

Sikeston firemen battled a blaze this morning at the home of Arnold McWorter of Bertrand Route One, located on Route O between Sikeston and Bertrand. According to Sikeston Fire Department officials, the fire started in the dwelling's bathroom of an unknown cause. No injuries were reported in the incident. Firemen received the call at 8:52 a.m., and the structure was well involved in flames when the firemen arrived. The house was a total loss, and only a few items of furniture were saved. Glenn Holt, 103 Second St., reported the theft of a citizen's band radio and tape player with FM converter from a car owned by Ervin Johnson of Bell City parked in front of Holt's residence. The stolen items wer valued at $238. The theft occurred Friday afternoon or Saturday morning.

Louis Jimerson, owner of Jimerson's Place, 108 Luther St., reported that his establishment was broken into Friday or Saturday. Three machines were damaged and about $13 in change was taken from a juke box.

Fire destroys rural home

Sikeston firemen battled a blaze this morning at the home of Arnold McWorter of Bertrand Route One, located on Route O between Sikeston and Bertrand. According to Sikeston Fire Department officials, the fire started in the dwelling's bathroom of an unknown cause. No injuries were reported in the incident. Firemen received the call at 8:52 a.m., and the structure was well involved in flames when the firemen arrived. The house was a total loss, and only a few items of furniture were saved.

THE PERIL OF POISONS

In a feature article published by the INDIANAPOLIS STAR, Dr. John H. Mennear, a professor of toxicology at Purdue University, sounds a timely warning to parents of small children.

Before the end of this year — 1976— Dr. Mennear warns, more than 5,000 people in America will die of poisoning, and another one million will be the victims of non-fatal poisoning episodes.

Tragically, reports Dr. Mennear, close to two-thirds of those poisoned this year will be children under five years of age.

These youngsters, Dr. Mennear says, will account for 70 per cent of all cases of aspirin poisoning; 82 per cent of all poisonings by soaps and detergents; 68 per cent of all poisonings with insecticides and rat poisons; and 52 per cent of all poisonings with medicines.

These tragic events can be averted or largely prevented, says Dr. Mennear, by observing nine safety rules for parents compiled by Dr. Jay Arena, a child health specialist.

The nine rules are:

— Never store mothballs, laundry detergents, floor polishes, etc. on shelves used for storing foods.

— Never use soft drink containers for storing leftover liquids like turpentine, drain cleaners or spot removers.

— Never give medicine to a child in the dark, or tell a child that medicine is "candy."

— Know that "child proof" containers are not child proof. They simply delay the child from getting the contents. Keep ALL medicines out of reach.

— Keep medicines in original containers so that they can quickly be identified in case of a poisoning emergency.

— Never keep medicines in your purse with candy and gum.

— Never place medicines on tables, counters, or window sills — even for an instant.

— Flush unused medicines down a drain — do not put them in the trash.

— Keep all yard and garden chemicals, such as weed killers, fertilizer, and gasoline, under lock and key.

By following these common sense warnings and rules by Doctors Mennear and Arena, you may prevent your child from becoming one of the grim poisoning statistics of 1976.

GOVERNMENT BY ETHNICITY

Something nobody apparently contemplated when the government got into the "affirmative action" business was that eventually everyone would demand a piece of the action — not just blacks or American Indians or the Spanish-surnamed.

The Chicago-headquartered midwestern regional office of the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development has announced it will extend affirmative action as regards its own work force to include Polish Americans. It is reportedly the first time a federal agency has agreed to seek proportionate representation of a white ethnic group among its employes.

The decision came as the result of pressure from the Illinois division of the Polish American Congress, which found that while the Polish population of the Chicago area was 19.8 per cent of the total, only 9.4 per cent of HUD employes were Polish.

If affirmative action on behalf of white ethnics in government is here, can the same requirement of private industry be far behind? And what's sauce for Polish Americans most certainly will be sauce for Graustarkian Americans, Transylvanian Americans and on and on and on.

And of course, way down at the end of the line, there all are all those Anglo-Saxons.

Speaking of Bicentennial travel, an estimated one-third of all Americans will be off on trips when the summer vacation season gets into gear in July. Millions who travel by car to places of historic or scenic interest will be taking tours in the form of rented tape players.

Descriptive tape tours are available at such attractions as Gettysburg National Military Park, the Great Smoky Mountains and Grand Teton, Glacier, Yosemite and Rockey Mountain National Parks. One of the newest auto tape tours guides visitors through the fascinating Pennsylvania Dutch country.

By driver along prescribed routes at suggested speeds and following the directions of the switched-on guides, vacationers are both informed and entertained on the go. YOUNG ADULTS ARE WHERE THE MONEY IS

The maker of a baby shampoo touts its product for adult use...A baby food company test-markets foods to appeal to older people...Blue jeans are cut fuller to accommodate the mature male figure...

These and other developments are cited by Industry Week magazine as evidence that the youth craze that dominates U.S. society for many years is ending. The babies of the 1950s and the hippies of the 1960s are growing older and the "action" during the next 15 years will more and more be in the young adult market.

In the 15 years between 1960 and 1975, the 15-to-29 year-old group in the U.S. population grew by 22.2 million people. But in the 15 years from 1975 to 1990, this group will decline by 2.6 million. At the same time, the number of people in the 30-to-45-year-old group will increase by 21.7 million, after having declined 0.3 million in the 1960-75 period.

Of all age groups, this older but still comparatively young group will show the greatest growth and will make up the largest segment of the economy. Thus businessmen are devoting intense study to try to determine just what kind of consumer animal members of this group will be.

For one thing, while they will become somewhat more conservative as they grow older, their values and attitudes will remain different from those of previous generations, a number of experts consulted by Industry Week agree. If there is a strong strain of antimaterialism, it is also coupled with a taste for luxuries, for quality and leisure.

This is reflected in a changing pattern of expenditures. A young man may turn down what excited his parents—a large car, for example. But he still spends money on expensive things—maybe motorcycles or long sking vacations. He's still spending money, but on new things.

"The previous generation lived to work; this one works to live," says Ohio State University marketing professor Roger D. Blackwell.

But there will likely be working frustrations for this group as well, thinks another expert. Instead of finding automatic job promotion possibilities, there will be more competition simply because of this group's sheer volume.

"You have a group of people in large numbers who will be replacing a group in small numbers, and the new group is generally better educated," says George H. Brown of the Conference Board, a New York-based business research organization.

Where are have all the flower children gone? No one is quite sure, but they're on their way.

A STEP IN THE WRONG DIRECTION

Several years ago the National Commission on State Workmens' Compensation Laws concluded that reform was needed, but it should be carried out at the state level. The states, after all, had the collective experience of more than 2,500 years in administering their own compensation laws.

Despite the severe recession of 1974-75 and the two-year delay by the federal government in providing the encouragement and the technical assistance recommended by the Commission, the states have made impressive improvements. In 1975 alone, close to 300 workers' compensation amendments were enacted by 49 state legislatures.

Still, some members of Congress believe that the system should come under federal domination. The proposed National Workers' Compensation Act of 1975 would bring one more program under the federal government's ever-spreading wing.

Even if this bill provided concrete ways to eliminate remaining abuses and inequities, federalizing what is already a sound system would be a questionable move. But H.R. 9431 doesn't even touch abuses. Reflecting on the government's mishandling of the Black Lung Program and other compensation matters, the present state set-up looks very satisfactory.

The best role for the federal government is to continue providing the states with encouragement and assistance in their efforts to improve and modernize their workers' compensation programs.

GRASSROOTS ENERGY CZARS

Energy czars are not confined to Washington, D. C. They are making their appearance at the grassroots, so to speak – in companies where saving energy is vital to success.

One such company, a leading forest products concern, has an energy czar in command of a ten-member task force charged with developing ways and means of economizing on energy consumption. According to the business editor of The Seattle Post- Intelligencer, "The task force came into being four years ago, at a time when most of us were blissfully ignorant of the whole matter." This company's energy czar calculates that his task force has saved the company some $1.2 million in fuel bills at a cost of $900,000. Savings currently are running at a rate of $2.5 million a year and growing all the time.

The ways in which the timber company is pioneering in energy conservation are striking. First, its so-called energy czar reports that researchers have found the U.S., as a whole, wastes 60 percent of the 73 quadrillion British Thermal Units (BTU) of energy produced each year. As prices of oil have risen, the drive to conserve energy and find substitute fuels has mounted. This particular timber company's engineers will shortly have drawing-board plans for a completely self-sufficient pulp mill. It is even looking into the possibility of using some of its own lands to grow trees or other crops for fuel. These conservation efforts are all part of a new BTU accounting system – a system whose purpose is to make the most efficient use of energy from whatever source it is derived.

A POLICE CASE OF SEXUAL EQUALITY

When does sexual equality amount to rank discrimination?

This is the question facing the U.S. Sixth Circuit Court of Appeals in Cincinnati in a case involving alleged unconstitutional discrimination against women candidates for the Columbus, Ohio, police department. The complaint is not that women are treated differently from men but that they are treated the same.

The department's physical tests require a candidate to run 440 yards in 100 seconds, scramble through an obstacle course and pull a revolver trigger so many times in one minute. Failing any of these tests eliminates the candidate.

"We question the nature of these tests and contend that they discriminate against women," an attorney for the National Organization for Women argued before the court the other day. "We are only asking that the tests be fair," he said, and by fair he means that the physical qualifications for women police officers should be less strenuous than for men.

A lawyer for the police department argued, however, that since all police academy graduates are immediately assigned the same jobs, both sexes should be trained alike. And no doubt there would be charges of discrimination if this were not true — if women were not given equal assignment opportunities, including that of beat patrolman, as well as equal pay.

But as one judge observed, chasing people is part of a police officer's job. So is firing a revolver. What happens in a perilous situation if a policewoman is unable to give her fellow officers the support and assistance they would expect from a man?

This talk about sexual equality is all very well, but despite contentions by some women libbers to the contrary, there is no escaping the fact that there are certain fundamental differences between men and women that no law or rule or judicial decree can erase.

And what about the less-vigorous male who is unable to pass the physicial tests but who might otherwise make a good officer — as good as any woman?

Company officials at Pitney-Bowes, Inc., estimate that by joining a four-person car pool, a commuting employe who drives 30 miles to and from work can save himself $328 a year in gas and lubrication costs at current prices.

In addition, the company projects the employe will conserve 2,046 gallons of gas, while substantially reducing the amount spent on car maintenance and tolls.

Pitney-Bowes is also encouraging car pools in order to lessen air pollution and relieve traffic congestion. The company is providing reserved parking spaces close to plant entrances for those people in three- or four-person car pools.

No Easy Answers Seen for Problem Of High Absenteeism

Depsite hard times for employes in the auto industry during periods of heavy layoffs, absenteeism is still a major problem.

Leonard Woodcock, president of the United Auto Workers, has stated that the union will have to take a larger role in combating absenteeism but he admits that discipline seems to have no effect and persuasion may not work.

During the years from 1970 through 1975, absentee rates have dropped a few tenths of a per cent but remain very high. Absenteeism creates problems in production and quality and is also resented by employes who work regularly.

With Monday and Friday the high absentee days, 10 to 15 per cent, one plant has recruited 120 college students to fill in on those days.

JACK ANDERSON SAYS: FBI's 'Black Bag' Jobs

with LES WHITTEN

WASHINGTON — The FBI, without technically telling an untruth, has led the public to believe its agents took part in no more than 238 criminal housebreakings. The actual figure is well over 1,000 and may surpass 2,000.

These "black bag" jobs, as the late FBI chief J. Edgar Hoover called them, were employed principally against suspected spies, organized crime figures, foreign diplomats and a few dangerous revolutionaries.

But Hoover also sent his agents to burglarize the premises of law-abiding U.S. citizens whom the old FBI curmudgeon simply disliked.

Confidenital FBI memos, obtained by the Senate Intelligence Committee, acknowledged that the "black bag" jobs violated the criminal laws the FBI was supposed to enforce. Yet we have learned from FBI sources that Hoover, although sworn to uphold the laws, personally sanctioned more than 1,000 of the break-ins.

Not until 1967 did Hoover take steps, in a self-serving memo turned up by the Senate probers, to end the break-ins. Even then, we have leanned, it wasn't his own idea but pressure from then-Atty. Gen. Ramsey Clark that brought the change.

The figure of 238 "surreptitions entries," as the burglaries were politely called, first appeared in an FBI memo to the Senate committee on Sept. 23, 1975.

The memo accurately but cagily reported that the 238 housebreakings were perpetrated against 14 "domestic subversive targets" during the 1942-68 period. But a careful reading shows the bureau left a hedge. Almost in passing, the memo indicates the figure is "incomplete," based as muchon the memory of agents as on actual data. Indeed, Hoover purposely destroyed many of the records dealing withthe break-ins, presumably to eliminate documentary evidence of the FBI crimes.

From our internal sources, however, we have ascertained that some top FBI officials believe the 1,000-to-2,000 figure is a "conservative estimate" of the total housebreakings. These include not only burglaries to get information but break-ins to install bugging devices.

One source said the housebreakings go back far beyond 1942 and never terminated completely in 1968. Under FBI chief Clarence Kelley, however, the bureau has scrupulously followed legal procedures.

The Senate Intelligence Committee, meanwhile, has pushed the FBI hard for more complete break-in figures. The committee will release a report shortly showing the confirmed housebreakings totaled slightly less than 1,000. Our higher figures, however, came from indisputable FBI sources.

In defense of the past practice of breaking and entering, the FIB said this technique was used only "to obtain secret and closely guarded organizational and financial information" or to plant electronic equipment in tthe most "highly selective" cases.

Footnote: Those who believe in law and order had better demand that it begin with the government. A lawless government is far more dangerous than any lawless individual. Yet in spite of the clear evidence that the FBI, CIA and other agencies engaged in illegal acts, the Senate Rules Committee led by Chairman Howard Cannon, D.-Nev., voted against strong oversight of these agencies.

CHAUFFEUR'S COMPLAINT: The former secretary of Rep. Phillip Burton, D.-Calif., a member of the powerful House leadership, has accused him of requiring her to chauffeur him around at all hours until it broke her health.

Mrs. Nina-Ann Coleman, 51, also claims she had to pay more than $15,000 from her own pocket for gasoline, repairs, insurance and a succession of cars since 1967 to keep up with Burton's 12-hour days.

In a confidential claim submitted to the Labor Dept. for disability paymens, the former secretary carges that she was pressed into service as a chauffeur not only for the congressman but for his wife, a movie star, union friends and other colleagues.

She ferried Mrs. Burton to the market, to clothing stores and to parties, the filed papers allege. On one occasion, Mrs. Coleman picked up a burton aide at Dulles Airport, she said, but later discovered he had submitted a voucher for the trip and had chiseled $20 out of the taxpayers. The staff member, Maurice Shean, vigourously denies the charge.

On the way home from another airport pickup, according to Mrs. Coleman, the cigarette smoke in her car was so thick, it precipitated an asthma attack. A statement from her doctor adds that she was so affected by the smoke, she had to be hospitalized.

Her husband, in another signed statement, said she became "a slave to her office," leading to two separations before she was fired by Burton earlier this year.

Responding to the Labor Dept.'s request for comment, Burton said Mrs. Coleman's illness had made her irritable, nervous and absent from work about two months a year since 1974. He conceded to us that she had driven him a great deal but said he had reimbursed her for some trips.

In any case, he said, chauffeuring "was part of her job responsibility and her pay reflected" the added responsibility.

Inside Labor

By Victor Riesel

Year of the Showdown:
Labor Chiefs open massive wage drive as Presidential Campaign heats up

WASHINGTON— I can still hear Dick Nixon cussing out one of his personal Armageddons. This one was the 13-week United Auto Workers (UAW) strike against General Motors in 1970. The President said the walkout had derailed American prosperity. And today Jerry Ford is being briefed during campaign breathers and is wondering aloud to his economic vizier Bill Seidman about the possibility of a similar derailment, circa 1976.

And with good reason. This nation is strung out with miniature Armageddons. And while there aren't any instant cataclysms, the potential is here – for this is the year the industrialists have decided to take one tough showdown with the onrushing unions. Labor chiefs recognize the challenge. So you'll soon see some fancy chariot work.

First, labor prexy George Many is making a personal thing of the rubber industry strike. Which means he's throwing his considerable weight behind the boycott of one of the Big Four tire manufacturers. Thus the conjecture now is that the industry will "solid-up." The prediction is for a six to eight weeks' strike of the tire factories. Since some auto manufactuers already are rolling cars and trucks to their dealers without the fifth (spare) tire, presumably there may be a tire shortage before strike's end.

This would kick some of the wedges from under the instant auto industry prosperity, complicate the July labor-management negotiations in the car field, and perhaps lead to a strike of one of the Big Three auto firms. Probably General Motors.

Auto union president Leonard Woodcock says the UAW will have some $175 million in its strike fund by mid-September, when the contracts expire. I reckon the moneys will run close to $200 million – a pity to waste. This could support the union's 400,000 GM hourly rated workers during a two-month strike.

Before we swing back to Meany's war on the rubber industry, it's vital to understand the mood of labor's rank and file these days -- its unskilled interpretation of the so-called Cost of Living Allowance, its great expectations and what I call its belief in latter-day "entitlements."

There's a new rank and file – much of it ethnic minorities, much of it young, all of it now better educated than a decade ago It believes that profitable union contracts must constantly pour out of what counsellor Arthur Goldberg once called "slot machine unionism." Put in your dues. Pull the handle. Out comes an agreement with heavy wage increases and exotic fringes now coming to over 50 per cent of the actual cash hourly rate.

Previous gains are inviolate no matter how economically impossible. That's the case in the silly San Francisco mini-general strike. Or in the rash of hospital strike threats, walkouts and nurses' job actions, just to mention a few of he hundreds of stoppages across the country.

There's the strike of 22,000 NY residential building service workers. They are the nation's highest paid in the non-skilled classification. They average a labor cost of $13,000 a year. They get 11 holidays, double time and a half for holiday work; 10 days sick leave and finally five weeks vacation. That's a 10-month year. And now they're demanding a $50-a-week hike, just for starters.

Ant the sanitation union's chief John DeLury says his unionists won't pick up the garbage of struck buildings though neatly piled in plastic bags at the edge of the sidewalk. And this one may run for a month.

This year the money just isn't available. That's the key. The money isn't there to pay them more and more. There are higher fuel costs, higher taxes, higher skilled craft repair rates. And now the New York hospital workers are demanding higher wages, though the municipal, state, federal and medicaid funds aren't there. The embattled unions are Local 1199, the Martin Luther King Jr. memorial union, and Victor Gotbaum's now-heavily publicized municipal employes. And there's the New York subway union which already gets $240 a week, plus heavy fringes for floor-washing porters.

With those unskilled workers in mind, let's view today's major Armageddon, the rubber industry front. Meany has just dispatched a three-page letter, with a six-page appendix, to all AFL-CIO state and local central federations, outlining full tire boycott strategy – right down to the most minute detail.

Word from longshoremen's leader Teddy Gleason is that his men won't unload imported tires which may be rushed in from Europe and Japan to keep auto plants operating as inventory vanishes.

So the jousting is on. Remember, the teamserrs set the pace last month with a heavy 11 to 12 per cent a year increase victory. If Meany's and rubber workers chief Pete Bommarito's boycott tactics succeed, the tire industry and finally the big auto industry will go the same route. And labor will win the mini-Armageddons all along the line.

And Jerry Ford, sitting in the same Oval Office as did his predecessor, will say the same things about his game plan being shot from under him. Since he's in the center he can't win. He loses if there is a wage explosion or if there are long strikes as the industrialists hold tight. It's his tough luck to be running for President in the showdown year on the labor front.

ALMOST LIKE BEING THERE

Speaking of Bicentennial travel, an estimated one-third of all Americans will be off on trips when the summer vacation season gets into gear in July. Millions who travel by car to places of historic or scenic interest will be taking tours in the form of rented tape players.

Descriptive tape tours are available at such attractions as Gettysburg National Military Park, the Great Smoky Mountains and Grand Teton, Glacier, Yosemite and Rockey Mountain National Parks. One of the newest auto tape tours guides visitors through the fascinating Pennsylvania Dutch country.

By driver along prescribed routes at suggested speeds and following the directions of the switched-on guides, vacationers are both informed and entertained on the go. Commentary on the tapes is synchronized withthe passing scene and includes facts about the historyof the region, what to do, where to stop and what to look for. In many cases, appropriate mood music and sound effects accompany the commentary.

It's almost like being there.

YOUNG ADULTS ARE WHERE THE MONEY IS

The maker of a baby shampoo touts its product for adult use...A baby food company test-markets foods to appeal to older people...Blue jeans are cut fuller to accommodate the mature male figure...

These and other developments are cited by Industry Week magazine as evidence that the youth craze that dominates U.S. society for many years is ending. The babies of the 1950s and the hippies of the 1960s are growing older and the "action" during the next 15 years will more and more be in the young adult market.

In the 15 years between 1960 and 1975, the 15-to-29 year-old group in the U.S. population grew by 22.2 million people. But in the 15 years from 1975 to 1990, this group will decline by 2.6 million. At the same time, the number of people in the 30-to-45-year-old group will increase by 21.7 million, after having declined 0.3 million in the 1960-75 period.

Of all age groups, this older but still comparatively young group will show the greatest growth and will make up the largest segment of the economy. Thus businessmen are devoting intense study to try to determine just what kind of consumer animal members of this group will be.

For one thing, while they will become somewhat more conservative as they grow older, their values and attitudes will remain different from those of previous generations, a number of experts consulted by Industry Week agree. If there is a strong strain of antimaterialism, it is also coupled with a taste for luxuries, for quality and leisure.

This is reflected in a changing pattern of expenditures. A young man may turn down what excited his parents—a large car, for example. But he still spends money on expensive things—maybe motorcycles or long sking vacations. He's still spending money, but on new things.

"The previous generation lived to work; this one works to live," says Ohio State University marketing professor Roger D. Blackwell.

But there will likely be working frustrations for this group as well, thinks another expert. Instead of finding automatic job promotion possibilities, there will be more competition simply because of this group's sheer volume.

"You have a group of people in large numbers who will be replacing a group in small numbers, and the new group is generally better educated," says George H. Brown of the Conference Board, a New York-based business research organization.

Where are have all the flower children gone? No one is quite sure, but they're on their way.

A STEP IN THE WRONG DIRECTION

Several years ago the National Commission on State Workmens' Compensation Laws concluded that reform was needed, but it should be carried out at the state level. The states, after all, had the collective experience of more than 2,500 years in administering their own compensation laws.

Despite the severe recession of 1974-75 and the two-year delay by the federal government in providing the encouragement and the technical assistance recommended by the Commission, the states have made impressive improvements. In 1975 alone, close to 300 workers' compensation amendments were enacted by 49 state legislatures.

Still, some members of Congress believe that the system should come under federal domination. The proposed National Workers' Compensation Act of 1975 would bring one more program under the federal government's ever-spreading wing.

Even if this bill provided concrete ways to eliminate remaining abuses and inequities, federalizing what is already a sound system would be a questionable move. But H.R. 9431 doesn't even touch abuses. Reflecting on the government's mishandling of the Black Lung Program and other compensation matters, the present state set-up looks very satisfactory.

The best role for the federal government is to continue providing the states with encouragement and assistance in their efforts to improve and modernize their workers' compensation programs.

GRASSROOTS ENERGY CZARS

Energy czars are not confined to Washington, D. C. They are making their appearance at the grassroots, so to speak -- in companies where saving energy is vital to success.

One such company, a leading forest products concern, has an energy czar in command of a ten-member task force charged with developing ways and means of economizing on energy consumption. According to the business editor of The Seattle Post- Intelligencer, "The task force came into being four years ago, at a time when most of us were blissfully ignorant of the whole matter." This company's energy czar calculates that his task force has saved the company some $1.2 million in fuel bills at a cost of $900,000. Savings currently are running at a rate of $2.5 million a year and growing all the time.

The ways in which the timber company is pioneering in energy conservation are striking. First, its so-called energy czar reports that researchers have found the U.S., as a whole, wastes 60 percent of the 73 quadrillion British Thermal Units (BTU) of energy produced each year. As prices of oil have risen, the drive to conserve energy and find substitute fuels has mounted. This particular timber company's engineers will shortly have drawing-board plans for a completely self-sufficient pulp mill. It is even looking into the possibility of using some of its own lands to grow trees or other crops for fuel. These conservation efforts are all part of a new BTU accounting system -- a system whose purpose is to make the most efficient use of energy from whatever source it is derived.

A POLICE CASE OF SEXUAL EQUALITY

When does sexual equality amount to rank discrimination?

This is the question facing the U.S. Sixth Circuit Court of Appeals in Cincinnati in a case involving alleged unconstitutional discrimination against women candidates for the Columbus, Ohio, police department. The complaint is not that women are treated differently from men but that they are treated the same.

The department's physical tests require a candidate to run 440 yards in 100 seconds, scramble through an obstacle course and pull a revolver trigger so many times in one minute. Failing any of these tests eliminates the candidate.

"We question the nature of these tests and contend that they discriminate against women," an attorney for the National Organization for Women argued before the court the other day. "We are only asking that the tests be fair," he said, and by fair he means that the physical qualifications for women police officers should be less strenuous than for men.

A lawyer for the police department argued, however, that since all police academy graduates are immediately assigned the same jobs, both sexes should be trained alike. And no doubt there would be charges of discrimination if this were not true — if women were not given equal assignment opportunities, including that of beat patrolman, as well as equal pay.

But as one judge observed, chasing people is part of a police officer's job. So is firing a revolver. What happens in a perilous situation if a policewoman is unable to give her fellow officers the support and assistance they would expect from a man?

This talk about sexual equality is all very well, but despite contentions by some women libbers to the contrary, there is no escaping the fact that there are certain fundamental differences between men and women that no law or rule or judicial decree can erase.

And what about the less-vigorous male who is unable to pass the physicial tests but who might otherwise make a good officer — as good as any woman?

SHARING THE DRIVING REDUCES POLLUTION AS WELL AS COSTS

If you've joined a car pool, you know you've made a wise move, but you may not know how smart you are.

Company officials at Pitney-Bowes, Inc., estimate that by joining a four-person car pool, a commuting employe who drives 30 miles to and from work can save himself $328 a year in gas and lubrication costs at current prices.

In addition, the company projects the employe will conserve 2,046 gallons of gas, while substantially reducing the amount spent on car maintenance and tolls.

Pitney-Bowes is also encouraging car pools in order to lessen air pollution and relieve traffic congestion. The company is providing reserved parking spaces close to plant entrances for those people in three- or four-person car pools.

Depsite hard times for employes in the auto industry during periods of heavy layoffs, absenteeism is still a major problem.

Leonard Woodcock, president of the United Auto Workers, has stated that the union will have to take a larger role in combating absenteeism but he admits that discipline seems to have no effect and persuasion may not work.

During the years from 1970 through 1975, absentee rates have dropped a few tenths of a per cent but remain very high. Absenteeism creates problems in production and quality and is also resented by employes who work regularly.

With Monday and Friday the high absentee days, 10 to 15 per cent, one plant has recruited 120 college students to fill in on those days.

Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Jack Anderson

JACK ANDERSON SAYS:
FBI's 'Black Bag' Jobs
with LES WHITTEN

WASHINGTON — The FBI, without technically telling an untruth, has led the public to believe its agents took part in no more than 238 criminal housebreakings. The actual figure is well over 1,000 and may surpass 2,000.

These "black bag" jobs, as the late FBI chief J. Edgar Hoover called them, were employed principally against suspected spies, organized crime figures, foreign diplomats and a few dangerous revolutionaries.

But Hoover also sent his agents to burglarize the premises of law-abiding U.S. citizens whom the old FBI curmudgeon simply disliked.

Confidenital FBI memos, obtained by the Senate Intelligence Committee, acknowledged that the "black bag" jobs violated the criminal laws the FBI was supposed to enforce. Yet we have learned from FBI sources that Hoover, although sworn to uphold the laws, personally sanctioned more than 1,000 of the break-ins.

Not until 1967 did Hoover take steps, in a self-serving memo turned up by the Senate probers, to end the break-ins. Even then, we have leanned, it wasn't his own idea but pressure from then-Atty. Gen. Ramsey Clark that brought the change.

The figure of 238 "surreptitions entries," as the burglaries were politely called, first appeared in an FBI memo to the Senate committee on Sept. 23, 1975.

The memo accurately but cagily reported that the 238 housebreakings were perpetrated against 14 "domestic subversive targets" during the 1942-68 period. But a careful reading shows the bureau left a hedge. Almost in passing, the memo indicates the figure is "incomplete," based as muchon the memory of agents as on actual data. Indeed, Hoover purposely destroyed many of the records dealing withthe break-ins, presumably to eliminate documentary evidence of the FBI crimes.

From our internal sources, however, we have ascertained that some top FBI officials believe the 1,000-to-2,000 figure is a "conservative estimate" of the total housebreakings. These include not only burglaries to get information but break-ins to install bugging devices.

One source said the housebreakings go back far beyond 1942 and never terminated completely in 1968. Under FBI chief Clarence Kelley, however, the bureau has scrupulously followed legal procedures.

The Senate Intelligence Committee, meanwhile, has pushed the FBI hard for more complete break-in figures. The committee will release a report shortly showing the confirmed housebreakings totaled slightly less than 1,000. Our higher figures, however, came from indisputable FBI sources.

In defense of the past practice of breaking and entering, the FIB said this technique was used only "to obtain secret and closely guarded organizational and financial information" or to plant electronic equipment in tthe most "highly selective" cases.

Footnote: Those who believe in law and order had better demand that it begin with the government. A lawless government is far more dangerous than any lawless individual. Yet in spite of the clear evidence that the FBI, CIA and other agencies engaged in illegal acts, the Senate Rules Committee led by Chairman Howard Cannon, D.-Nev., voted against strong oversight of these agencies.

CHAUFFEUR'S COMPLAINT: The former secretary of Rep. Phillip Burton, D.-Calif., a member of the powerful House leadership, has accused him of requiring her to chauffeur him around at all hours until it broke her health.

Mrs. Nina-Ann Coleman, 51, also claims she had to pay more than $15,000 from her own pocket for gasoline, repairs, insurance and a succession of cars since 1967 to keep up with Burton's 12-hour days.

In a confidential claim submitted to the Labor Dept. for disability paymens, the former secretary carges that she was pressed into service as a chauffeur not only for the congressman but for his wife, a movie star, union friends and other colleagues.

She ferried Mrs. Burton to the market, to clothing stores and to parties, the filed papers allege. On one occasion, Mrs. Coleman picked up a burton aide at Dulles Airport, she said, but later discovered he had submitted a voucher for the trip and had chiseled $20 out of the taxpayers. The staff member, Maurice Shean, vigourously denies the charge.

On the way home from another airport pickup, according to Mrs. Coleman, the cigarette smoke in her car was so thick, it precipitated an asthma attack. A statement from her doctor adds that she was so affected by the smoke, she had to be hospitalized.

Her husband, in another signed statement, said she became "a slave to her office," leading to two separations before she was fired by Burton earlier this year.

Responding to the Labor Dept.'s request for comment, Burton said Mrs. Coleman's illness had made her irritable, nervous and absent from work about two months a year since 1974. He conceded to us that she had driven him a great deal but said he had reimbursed her for some trips.

In any case, he said, chauffeuring "was part of her job responsibility and her pay reflected" the added responsibility.

Inside Labor

By Victor Riesel

Year of the Showdown:
Labor Chiefs open massive wage drive as Presidential Campaign heats up

WASHINGTON— I can still hear Dick Nixon cussing out one of his personal Armageddons. This one was the 13-week United Auto Workers (UAW) strike against General Motors in 1970. The President said the walkout had derailed American prosperity. And today Jerry Ford is being briefed during campaign breathers and is wondering aloud to his economic vizier Bill Seidman about the possibility of a similar derailment, circa 1976.

And with good reason. This nation is strung out with miniature Armageddons. And while there aren't any instant cataclysms, the potential is here – for this is the year the industrialists have decided to take one tough showdown with the onrushing unions. Labor chiefs recognize the challenge. So you'll soon see some fancy chariot work.

First, labor prexy George Many is making a personal thing of the rubber industry strike. Which means he's throwing his considerable weight behind the boycott of one of the Big Four tire manufacturers. Thus the conjecture now is that the industry will "solid-up." The prediction is for a six to eight weeks' strike of the tire factories. Since some auto manufactuers already are rolling cars and trucks to their dealers without the fifth (spare) tire, presumably there may be a tire shortage before strike's end.

This would kick some of the wedges from under the instant auto industry prosperity, complicate the July labor-management negotiations in the car field, and perhaps lead to a strike of one of the Big Three auto firms. Probably General Motors.

Auto union president Leonard Woodcock says the UAW will have some $175 million in its strike fund by mid-September, when the contracts expire. I reckon the moneys will run close to $200 million – a pity to waste. This could support the union's 400,000 GM hourly rated workers during a two-month strike.

Before we swing back to Meany's war on the rubber industry, it's vital to understand the mood of labor's rank and file these days -- its unskilled interpretation of the so-called Cost of Living Allowance, its great expectations and what I call its belief in latter-day "entitlements."

There's a new rank and file – much of it ethnic minorities, much of it young, all of it now better educated than a decade ago It believes that profitable union contracts must constantly pour out of what counsellor Arthur Goldberg once called "slot machine unionism." Put in your dues. Pull the handle. Out comes an agreement with heavy wage increases and exotic fringes now coming to over 50 per cent of the actual cash hourly rate.

Previous gains are inviolate no matter how economically impossible. That's the case in the silly San Francisco mini-general strike. Or in the rash of hospital strike threats, walkouts and nurses' job actions, just to mention a few of he hundreds of stoppages across the country.

There's the strike of 22,000 NY residential building service workers. They are the nation's highest paid in the non-skilled classification. They average a labor cost of $13,000 a year. They get 11 holidays, double time and a half for holiday work; 10 days sick leave and finally five weeks vacation. That's a 10-month year. And now they're demanding a $50-a-week hike, just for starters.

Ant the sanitation union's chief John DeLury says his unionists won't pick up the garbage of struck buildings though neatly piled in plastic bags at the edge of the sidewalk. And this one may run for a month.

This year the money just isn't available. That's the key. The money isn't there to pay them more and more. There are higher fuel costs, higher taxes, higher skilled craft repair rates. And now the New York hospital workers are demanding higher wages, though the municipal, state, federal and medicaid funds aren't there. The embattled unions are Local 1199, the Martin Luther King Jr. memorial union, and Victor Gotbaum's now-heavily publicized municipal employes. And there's the New York subway union which already gets $240 a week, plus heavy fringes for floor-washing porters.

With those unskilled workers in mind, let's view today's major Armageddon, the rubber industry front. Meany has just dispatched a three-page letter, with a six-page appendix, to all AFL-CIO state and local central federations, outlining full tire boycott strategy – right down to the most minute detail.

Word from longshoremen's leader Teddy Gleason is that his men won't unload imported tires which may be rushed in from Europe and Japan to keep auto plants operating as inventory vanishes.

So the jousting is on. Remember, the teamserrs set the pace last month with a heavy 11 to 12 per cent a year increase victory. If Meany's and rubber workers chief Pete Bommarito's boycott tactics succeed, the tire industry and finally the big auto industry will go the same route. And labor will win the mini-Armageddons all along the line.

And Jerry Ford, sitting in the same Oval Office as did his predecessor, will say the same things about his game plan being shot from under him. Since he's in the center he can't win. He loses if there is a wage explosion or if there are long strikes as the industrialists hold tight. It's his tough luck to be running for President in the showdown year on the labor front.

Diaphragm effective for all age groups

NEW YORK (AP) — The diaphragm remains a highly effective method of contaception for women of all childbearing ages, including teen-agers, a study reported today by Planned Parenthood-World Population says.

"After one year, only 2 per cent of the more than 2,000 diaphragm users studied had suffered an accidental pregnancy," Planned Parenthood said.

The organization said the conclusion came from the largest clinical study ever of diaphragm use in the United States. It involved 2,168 diaphragm users examined at New York City's Margaret Sanger Research Bureau between 1971 and 1973.

It is being published in Family Planning Perspectives.

Accidental pregnancy rates were lowest among women younger than 18 — 1.9 per 100 users — and among women aged 35 and older — no pregnancies, the report said.

"The low pregnancy rate we observed among teen-agers challenges the conventional wisdom that the diaphragm is somehow an old-fashioned birth control method acceptable only to older women," said Dr. Mary E. Lane, one of the researchers and formerly clinical director of the bureau.

The authors said their study showed lower pregnancy rates than any previous research on the subject. Several factors were responsible, they said, including use of objective methods, detailed teaching and continuing supervision.

"The participation of personnel who believed in the method and who passed the skill to teach it was crucial," the authors said. Other authors were Rosalinda Arceo and Aquiles J. Sobrero.

The researchers cited a British study which said there was no clear association between social class and accidental preganancy. They said the British study concluded that women already using the diaphragm do not have to be urged to change to a more modern method.

After one year, 83-84 per cent of the women who selected the diaphragm were still using it, the researchers said. Of those who stopped, .2 per cent did so for medical reasons, 2 per cent because of pregnancy, 14-15 per cent for personal reasons, they reported.

Those who quit using the diaphragm for personal reasons did so because they saw advantages in other methods or rejected the device because of messiness, difficulty of insertion, partners' objections or lack of confidence, the study said.

Alcohol lifts mold from leather boots

BAKED TOMATOES A LA BURL IVES

This recipe came to me via a friend of the well-known actor and folksinger.

4 medium tomatoes, 1¼ to 1½ pounds
1 clove garlic, minced
4 teaspoons oilive oil
Salt and pepper to taste
½ cup parsley sprigs (not packed down), minced

Cut a thin slice from the top of each tomato. Cut very small plug out of each. Press the garlic into the openings; spoon in the oil. Sprinkle with salt and pepper. Cover with parsley; it will stay green during the baking. Bake in a preheated 350-degree oven just until hot through — 15 minutes. Makes 4 servings.

Mrs. Daniel pointed out that her father, the late President Harry S. Truman, had received a similar degree from Rockhurst in 1960.

Ann Landers

Reader says adoption's the best

Dear Ann Landers: Recently an 18-year-old girl wrote and asked if she should have an abortion. She said it was not against her religion but was afraid the guilt might haunt her forever. You said, "Don't do it!"

May I say a few words to that young woman and to others who may be struggling with the same decision?

My husband and I were told we would never be able to have a family. We immediately put our name in at two adoption agencies. We waited for two years and were becoming very discouraged. Then we received that wonderful phone call. A young girl was about to deliver in three weeks. She had decided to give up her child for adoption. You should have seen my husband. We went into orbit. It was unreal. I was on Cloud 19. We immediately called in the painters and the paperhangers. The den was turned into a nursery. Our families, friends and neighbors brought gifts. Now all we had to do was wait.

Then the call came. The doctor said we had a beautiful, 7-pound baby girl. After five days of indescribable excitement, we drove to the hospital to pick up our angel. We never saw the mother, which I'm sure was best for all concerned.

I would like to say a word to that courageous young woman. Thank you, dear little mother, for having the maturity and wisdom to give up your child. She has brought real meaning and joy to our lives.

There will be times when you will wonder how your little girl is getting along, and what life would have been like had you kept her. Let me assure you she is being cared for and loved by a grateful family.

Hopefully you will one day marry and have other children, but the memory of your first-born will always be with you. Please know you will be remembered in our prayers as the most courageous and unselfish person in the world. -- No Name, No City, No Inititals

Dear Friends: I wonder how many young mothers will wonder if this letter was meant for them. A good many, I hope. Thank you for writing.

Dear Ann Landers: My problem is no big deal, but I hope you will print it because I'll bet there are loads of teens like myself who are bugged plenty by this. (I'm a 15-year-old high school sophomore.)

When someone phones me and I am not at home, nobody ever bothers to tell me. The next day at school, Mary or Bill or Joanie will say, "Why didn't you call me back?" I have to tell them I didn't know they called. This is embarrassing because it looks like nobody in my family cares enough about me to give me a message, which is humiliating and irritating. It also makes me wonder how many good times I have missed out on because of my family's lack of consideration.--Meriden, Cann.

Dear Conn.: Read this column aloud at the dinner table tonight. Tell your family you wrote the letter. Offer to put a message pad by the phone with a pen or pencil attached. Ask them if they will please jot down the name of anyone who calls in your absence. Offer to do the same for them. If you make this request like a lady (no yelling or accusations) it should generate a feeling of peace and harmony -- and I'll bet you'll get your messages in the future.

A no-nonsense approach to how to deal with life's most difficult and most rewarding arrangement. Ann Landers's booklet, "Marriage -- What to Expect," will prepare you for better or for worse. Send your request to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 1400, Elgin, Ill. 60120, enclosing 50 cents in coin and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope.

A June 12 wedding is planned.

Diaphragm effective for all age groups

NEW YORK (AP) — The diaphragm remains a highly effective method of contaception for women of all childbearing ages, including teen-agers, a study reported today by Planned Parenthood-World Population says.

"After one year, only 2 per cent of the more than 2,000 diaphragm users studied had suffered an accidental pregnancy," Planned Parenthood said.

The organization said the conclusion came from the largest clinical study ever of diaphragm use in the United States. It involved 2,168 diaphragm users examined at New York City's Margaret Sanger Research Bureau between 1971 and 1973.

It is being published in Family Planning Perspectives.

Accidental pregnancy rates were lowest among women younger than 18 — 1.9 per 100 users — and among women aged 35 and older — no pregnancies, the report said.

"The low pregnancy rate we observed among teen-agers challenges the conventional wisdom that the diaphragm is somehow an old-fashioned birth control method acceptable only to older women," said Dr. Mary E. Lane, one of the researchers and formerly clinical director of the bureau.

The authors said their study showed lower pregnancy rates than any previous research on the subject. Several factors were responsible, they said, including use of objective methods, detailed teaching and continuing supervision.

"The participation of personnel who believed in the method and who passed the skill to teach it was crucial," the authors said. Other authors were Rosalinda Arceo and Aquiles J. Sobrero.

The researchers cited a British study which said there was no clear association between social class and accidental preganancy. They said the British study concluded that women already using the diaphragm do not have to be urged to change to a more modern method.

After one year, 83-84 per cent of the women who selected the diaphragm were still using it, the researchers said. Of those who stopped, .2 per cent did so for medical reasons, 2 per cent because of pregnancy, 14-15 per cent for personal reasons, they reported.

Those who quit using the diaphragm for personal reasons did so because they saw advantages in other methods or rejected the device because of messiness, difficulty of insertion, partners' objections or lack of confidence, the study said.

Alcohol lifts mold from leather boots

By Polly Cramer

Polly's Problem

DEAR POLLY — Is there any way to remove mold from a pair of 75-year-old leather boots? They were packed in a box that water seeped into thus causing the mold. —LESA.

DEAR LESA — Brush off any excess and then try going over the boots with a soft cloth that has been wrung out of denatured alcohol. When mold is removed treat the leather with a leather dressing or even a high grade petroleum jelly. —POLLY.

DEAR POLLY — My Pet Peeve is with those companies who insist that one give the complete name and address when ordering something, and then their replies come back with only the first initial of the name instead of the entire name. Three people in our family have first names beginning with the same initial and we never know what mail belongs to whom. Many companies selling things or asking for donations have never received an answer just because of this. —MARY B.

Baked tomato recipe

BAKED TOMATOES A LA BURL IVES

This recipe came to me via a friend of the well-known actor and folksinger.

4 medium tomatoes, 1¼ to 1½ pounds
1 clove garlic, minced
4 teaspoons oilive oil
Salt and pepper to taste
½ cup parsley sprigs (not packed down), minced

Cut a thin slice from the top of each tomato. Cut very small plug out of each. Press the garlic into the openings; spoon in the oil. Sprinkle with salt and pepper. Cover with parsley; it will stay green during the baking. Bake in a preheated 350-degree oven just until hot through — 15 minutes. Makes 4 servings.

Truman's daughter gets honorary degree

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Saying she would always have special affection for Rockhurst College, Margaret Truman Daniel received an honorary doctorate of humanities Sunday at the college's 56th commencement.

Mrs. Daniel pointed out that her father, the late President Harry S. Truman, had received a similar degree from Rockhurst in 1960.

Ann Landers

Reader says adoption's the best

Dear Ann Landers: Recently an 18-year-old girl wrote and asked if she should have an abortion. She said it was not against her religion but was afraid the guilt might haunt her forever. You said, "Don't do it!"

May I say a few words to that young woman and to others who may be struggling with the same decision?

My husband and I were told we would never be able to have a family. We immediately put our name in at two adoption agencies. We waited for two years and were becoming very discouraged. Then we received that wonderful phone call. A young girl was about to deliver in three weeks. She had decided to give up her child for adoption. You should have seen my husband. We went into orbit. It was unreal. I was on Cloud 19. We immediately called in the painters and the paperhangers. The den was turned into a nursery. Our families, friends and neighbors brought gifts. Now all we had to do was wait.

Then the call came. The doctor said we had a beautiful, 7-pound baby girl. After five days of indescribable excitement, we drove to the hospital to pick up our angel. We never saw the mother, which I'm sure was best for all concerned.

4 for 4 Johnson sparks Astros to 10-5 triumph

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Soft-spoken Cliff Johnson crashed four hits Sunday for the Houston Astros and silenced more than the St. Louis Cardinals.

Also subdued at least for the moment by the bat barrage of the massive catcher were his own critics.

"It's too early in the season to get upset about things like that," the 6-foot-4 Johnson said with a shrug of rumblings heard preceding the Astros' 10-5 triumph.

"I was a little more relaxed today," he noted. "I thought today typified the type of hitter I should be. I hadn't been waiting with my body to let my hands do the work."

Whatever the formula, an assortment of four St. Louis pitchers beginning with John Denny, 1-2, found it intolerable.

Johnson, a .213 hitter at the day's outset, slugged a home run in his first time at bat and doubled home fleet Enos Cabell in his second.

In the fifth inning he followed Jose Cruz' double with a single to kayo Denny and in the seventh singled and scored a third time.

"I guess he thought I was a good one to throw it to," Johnson said of a Denny changeup he lined over the left field wall in the second inning for his fourth homer of the year.

"He's got a good change," Johnson insisted. "It's a good pitch to throw and he can throw it well. He got me out a couple of times with it last year."

Johnson's first of two singles, off a Denny curve, helped Houston mount a 6-1 advantage for starter Larry Dierker, 4-3, who pitched eight innings.

"I felt good. I could have gone all the way, but they wanted to let Kenny (Forsch) get some work in a non-pressure situation," said Dierker, who departed with a 10-2 lead.

"It's the first big day with the bat we've had this year," Virdon said. "Big hitters like Johnson are sometimes like that. Once they bust loose, you better watch out."

BALTIMORE (AP) — George Brett and Fred Patek showed a lot of ability at the plate during the weekend in Baltimore, and it could cost the Kansas City infielders $100 apiece.

Brett had seven hits in 13 trips and Patek went 4-for-9 as the Royals took the series 2-1, but it was a different kind of plate that got them into potential trouble with Manager Whitey Herzog.

"Patek, Brett and Jamie Quirk were each a pound overweight before the game," Herzog said after the Royals whipped the Orioles 7-4 Sunday. "If they're still over on Tuesday, it'll cost each of them $100."

"I think I know what did it," joked Herzog, who once played in Baltimore and knows the town's favorite culinary delicacy. "Last night they ate about $120 worth of crabs and drank some beer."

Still, Brett had singles in his first three times at bat, and he had gone 7-for-8 before being retired in the sixth inning. He had the first hit when Kansas City scored five runs in the third, marking the fifth time in two games he had contributed to a rallv.

The 5-foot-4 Patek, the smallest player in the major leagues who may be even faster this season after dropping 20 pounds down to 145, had a four-game hitting streak stopped but swiped his ninth base in 10 tries.

Bob Stinton and Frank White knocked in two runs apiece for the Royals, who collected 30 hits in the series and shelled Baltimore ace Jim Palmer, 4-4, for eight hits in his 2 2-3 inning stint Sunday.

After winning Friday night, Baltimore's all-time record at home against Kansas City stood at 33-9. But the Royals then topped Ken Holtzman and Palmer, the best of the Orioles' pitchers, to notch two consecutive victories in Baltimore for the first time ever.

The winning pitcher Sunday was Mark Littell, a former starter who volunteered for bullpen duty this spring and has yet to give up an earned run in 14 2-3 innings.

"I've been a starter all my life and I'd rather start," said the 23-year-old Littell. "But I volunteered for the bullpen in spring training because that was the only spot open."

"If George Throop hadn't gotten hurt," Herzog conceded, "Littell probably would have been sent back to Omaha at least for the first month of the season. But Mark looked impressive in the spring, and he's been great since the season started."

Littell allowed three hits and no runs over the final 4 2-3 innings, after replacing starter Al Fitzmorris in the fifth.

Lee May, who hit two homers Saturday night, and Reggie Jackson had three hits apiece for Baltimore. It was the best performance by Jackson since he ended a four-week holdout and joined the Orioles a week ago.

Nets take 3-1 lead in ABA finals over Denver

DENVER (AP) — The Denver Nuggets, the American Basketball Association's regular-season champions, "haven't proven anything except that we can get down 3-1 in the playoffs," says Coach Larry Brown.

The reeling Nuggets found themselves in that precarious position today against the confident, surging New York Nets as they prepared for Tuesday night's fifth game of the best-of-seven championship series. The Nuggets beat New York in all nine regular-season games at McNichols Arena before splitting the first two games of this series. If the Nuggets win Game Five, the teams will return to the Nassau Coliseum in Uniondale, N.Y., Thursday night for the sixth game.

The Nets, led by Julius Erving's 34 points and helped by John Williamson's 24, Brian Taylor's 23 and Jim Eakins' 17, whipped the Nuggets 121-112 Saturday night, moving within one victory of clinching their second league title in three years.

The loss was more one-sided than the score indicated — the Nets led by as many as 19 points before Denver closed the gap in the closing minutes. And it left the Nuggets — the only ABA team ever to win 60 games two seasons in a row — bewildered and questioning their own ability.

"I thought we lost our poise in the second half," said Brown. "We also took bad shots and turned the ball over without purpose. Our foul shooting was awful (20-for-35) and we had individual breakdowns all over the place. It was just a disaster. Once we broke down, there was just a lot of wishing and hoping."

"We didn't play very well defensively," said rookie star David Thompson, who scored 23 points. "We lacked a little concentration. But now that we're down 3-1, maybe we'll start concentrating more."

McBride placed on disabled list

ST. LOUIS (AP) — "It's exactly the same thing that happened a year ago," crestfallen Bake McBride said. "I'm the only one I know of who's had injuries like this."

The 27-year-old McBride, the National League's top rookie in 1974, was placed on baseball's 15-day disabled list Sunday by the St. Louis Cardinals following a shoulder injury he suffered the night before against the Houston Astros.

"I got it while I was hitting. I hit the ball foul before I walked," explained McBride, who was sidelined 23 days last year by a similar injury.

"This is the best start I've ever had," he added in respect to his .365 batting average, "but they say I won't even be able to swing a bat for a week to 10 days."

The Cards, who reactivated infielder Mike Tyson to take McBride's place on their 25-player roster, indicated Mike Anderson and Luis Melendez will alternate at McBride's center field position.

Because of the injury the Cards also retained 22-year-old infielder Doug Clarey, who was called up April 16 when Tyson went on the disabled list.

Southeast Missouri State won two titles while Northeast Missouri State and Southwest Missouri State captured one each as the Missouri Intercollegiate Athletic Association spring season concluded with championship events this weekend.

Six conference records were tied or broken Saturday at Jefferson City where Southeast won the outdoor track and field title by compiling 76 points.

The Cape Girardeau school also earned the baseball title by finishing with a 15-2 record following a pair of shutout victories over Southwest Missouri.

Northwest Missouri romped to its sixth straight tennis championship on its home court in Maryville, running up 54 points to the 21 total of second-place Southwest Missouri.

And in golf, Northeast Missouri's five-man team shot a total of 788 over 36 holes of play at a Bonne Terre course. The Kirksville school finished four strokes in front of the University of Missouri-Rolla.

There were four double winners in the MIAA track meet, hosted by Lincoln University.

They were Kenneth Harris of Lincoln in the triple jump and long jump, Dan Dwyer of Southwest in the three-mile run and six-mile run, Darrell Hilkerbaumer of Southeast in the 120 high hurdles and 440 intermediate hurdles, and Richard Wilson of Southeast in the 100-yard and 200-yard dashes.

Central Missouri State finished second in team standings with 54½ points while Northeast was third with 52.

Home runs by Bill Cricione and Ralph Kuehn augmented the shutout pitching of Dave Jorn and Trae Hastings as Southeast clinched the baseball title by beating Northwest, 4-0 and 1-0, at Cape Girardeau.

Southwest Missouri, the only other MIAA team with a chance to catch the Indians, was eliminated from contention by Southeast's twin-bill sweep.

The MIAA tennis tourney was no contest as Northwest Missouri swept all nine finals matches in coasting to its title.

Northwest's Jukka Narakka of Finland beat Southwest's David Feltner, 6-1, 6-2, for the singles championship and then combined with Norm Riek to beat Southwest's Roger Buenemann and Charlie Vaughan, 6-1, 6-1, for the doubles title.

Lincoln's Brian Boudria shot an even-par 144 to win medalist honors during the two-day golf meet at the Terre Du Lac golf course, pacing his team to a third-place finish.

Tigers advance into Big Eight baseball finals

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP)—The Big Eight Conference's big bats were booming at Oklahoma City's All-Sports Stadium Sunday as Missouri, Colorado, and Oklahoma posted victories in the league's first post-season tournament to determine the conference championship.

Missouri rode a three-run homer by Mark Thiel and a two-run double by Al Hightower to a 7-6 victory over Iowa State to advance to the winners' bracket finals against Colorado, which got a three-run homer from Kevin Kirk Sunday in clubbing Oklahoma State, 8-0.

Meanwhile defending champion Oklahoma, a 4-2 loser to Missouri on Saturday, exploded for 19 hits in crushing Nebraska, 15-5, and Kansas State rallied past Kansas, 8-3. Both Nebraska and Kansas were eliminated.

Today's action pits Kansas State vs. Iowa State at 1:30 p.m., Oklahoma vs. Oklahoma State at 5:30 p.m. and Missouri vs. Colorado at 8 p.m.

Missouri, 43-19, had to rally for three runs in the bottom of the seventh to nip the Cyclones. Hightower's opposite field double just inside first base chased home two runs of the runs home to erase a 5-4 Iowa State advantage. Missouri had struck for four runs in the bottom of the first, with Thiel cracking a three-run homer, his 11th of the season.

But the Cyclones, 27-27, fought back with one in the second and three in the third to tie it 4-4. They held onto the lead until Hightower's blow.

PeteWoods got his ninth victory without a loss, getting relief help from Jeff Cornel.

Gary Brackeen, 10-5, hurled a no-hitter for six and two third innings and his Oklahoma teammates went wild at the plate in burying Nebraska.

The Sooners jumped out to a 4-0 lead in the first, with two of the runs coming on Terry Bogener's triple, and led 11-0 before Gary Healey's two-out double ruined Brackeen's bid for a no-hitter.

Oklahoma is now 56-15 and Nebraska finished at 21-24.

Kansas State rallied for three runs in the sixth inning to break a 2-2 tie then rode the five-hit pitching of Dave Tuttle to its win over the Jayhawks.

Carl Heinrich's two-run homer to left field in the second inning had given the Jayhawks a 2-1 lead, but Kansas State tied it in the fifth then jumped ahead to stay in the sixth.

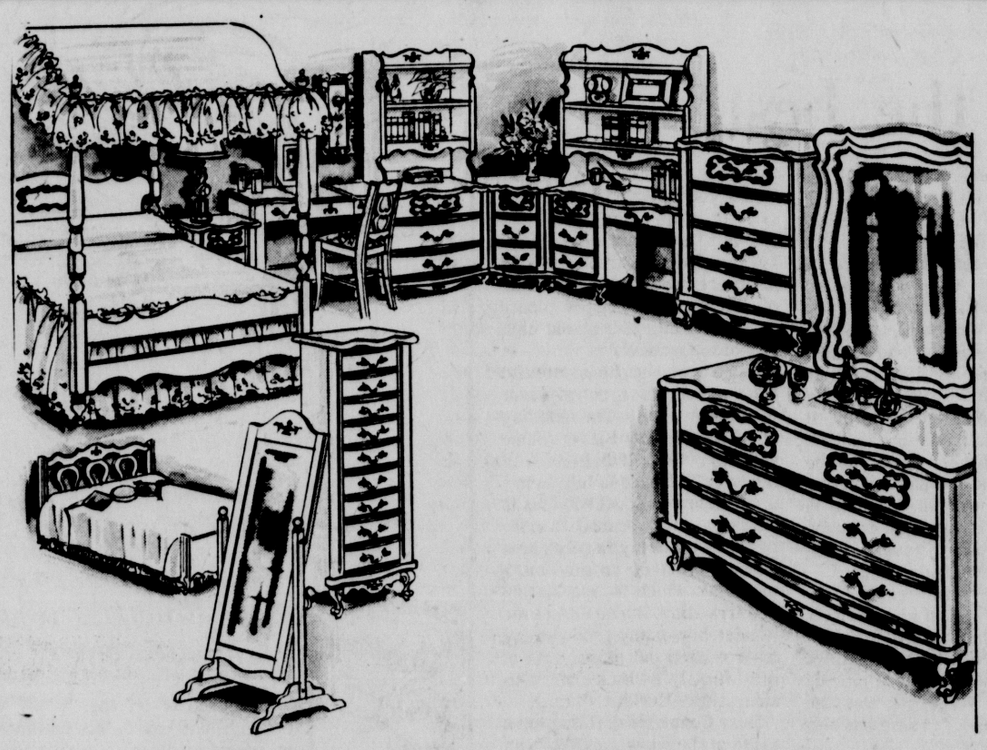

After yielding Heinrich's long shot over the left field wall, Tuttle settled down and allowed only three hits thereafter in raising his record to 8-3.

Kirk slugged a three-run homer in the first inning and Dave Hall and Leon Schielke combined for a five-hit shutout to lead Colorado to its shutout of the Cowboys.

Kirk caught a Bob Evans fast ball and sent it far over the left field wall for his 12th homer of the year.

The win was the sixth against two losses for Hall, who was relieved by Scheilke with one out in the seventh. The Cowboys had their chances, working Hall and Scheilke for six walks, five hits, two errors and a hit batsman, but stranded a dozen base runners.

Colorado coach Irv Brown enlivened the game when he abruptly planted a kiss on the cheek of umpire Larry Zirbel following a heated argument over a checked-swing call in the seventh inning.

4 for 4 Johnson sparks Astros to 10-5 triumph

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Soft-spoken Cliff Johnson crashed four hits Sunday for the Houston Astros and silenced more than the St. Louis Cardinals.

Also subdued at least for the moment by the bat barrage of the massive catcher were his own critics.

"It's too early in the season to get upset about things like that," the 6-foot-4 Johnson said with a shrug of rumblings heard preceding the Astros' 10-5 triumph.

"I was a little more relaxed today," he noted. "I thought today typified the type of hitter I should be. I hadn't been waiting with my body to let my hands do the work."

Whatever the formula, an assortment of four St. Louis pitchers beginning with John Denny, 1-2, found it intolerable.

Johnson, a .213 hitter at the day's outset, slugged a home run in his first time at bat and doubled home fleet Enos Cabell in his second.

In the fifth inning he followed Jose Cruz' double with a single to kayo Denny and in the seventh singled and scored a third time.

"I guess he thought I was a good one to throw it to," Johnson said of a Denny changeup he lined over the left field wall in the second inning for his fourth homer of the year.

"He's got a good change," Johnson insisted. "It's a good pitch to throw and he can throw it well. He got me out a couple of times with it last year."

Johnson's first of two singles, off a Denny curve, helped Houston mount a 6-1 advantage for starter Larry Dierker, 4-3, who pitched eight innings.

"I felt good. I could have gone all the way, but they wanted to let Kenny (Forsch) get some work in a non-pressure situation," said Dierker, who departed with a 10-2 lead.

"It's the first big day with the bat we've had this year," Virdon said. "Big hitters like Johnson are sometimes like that. Once they bust loose, you better watch out."

Littell gets win in relief as hot Royals stop Baltimore 7-4

BALTIMORE (AP) — George Brett and Fred Patek showed a lot of ability at the plate during the weekend in Baltimore, and it could cost the Kansas City infielders $100 apiece.

Brett had seven hits in 13 trips and Patek went 4-for-9 as the Royals took the series 2-1, but it was a different kind of plate that got them into potential trouble with Manager Whitey Herzog.

"Patek, Brett and Jamie Quirk were each a pound overweight before the game," Herzog said after the Royals whipped the Orioles 7-4 Sunday. "If they're still over on Tuesday, it'll cost each of them $100."

"I think I know what did it," joked Herzog, who once played in Baltimore and knows the town's favorite culinary delicacy. "Last night they ate about $120 worth of crabs and drank some beer."

Still, Brett had singles in his first three times at bat, and he had gone 7-for-8 before being retired in the sixth inning. He had the first hit when Kansas City scored five runs in the third, marking the fifth time in two games he had contributed to a rally.

The 5-foot-4 Patek, the smallest player in the major leagues who may be even faster this season after dropping 20 pounds down to 145, had a four-game hitting streak stopped but swiped his ninth base in 10 tries.

Bob Stinton and Frank White knocked in two runs apiece for the Royals, who collected 30 hits in the series and shelled Baltimore ace Jim Palmer, 4-4, for eight hits in his 2 2-3 inning stint Sunday.

After winning Friday night, Baltimore's all-time record at home against Kansas City stood at 33-9. But the Royals then topped Ken Holtzman and Palmer, the best of the Orioles' pitchers, to notch two consecutive victories in Baltimore for the first time ever.

The winning pitcher Sunday was Mark Littell, a former starter who volunteered for bullpen duty this spring and has yet to give up an earned run in 14 2-3 innings.

"I've been a starter all my life and I'd rather start," said the 23-year-old Littell. "But I volunteered for the bullpen in spring training because that was the only spot open."

"If George Throop hadn't gotten hurt," Herzog conceded, "Littell probably would have been sent back to Omaha at least for the first month of the season. But Mark looked impressive in the spring, and he's been great since the season started."

Littell allowed three hits and no runs over the final 4 2-3 innings, after replacing starter Al Fitzmorris in the fifth.

Lee May, who hit two homers Saturday night, and Reggie Jackson had three hits apiece for Baltimore. It was the best performance by Jackson since he ended a four-week holdout and joined the Orioles a week ago.

Nets take 3-1 lead in ABA finals over Denver

DENVER (AP) — The Denver Nuggets, the American Basketball Association's regular-season champions, "haven't proven anything except that we can get down 3-1 in the playoffs," says Coach Larry Brown.

The reeling Nuggets found themselves in that precarious position today against the confident, surging New York Nets as they prepared for Tuesday night's fifth game of the best-of-seven championship series. The Nuggets beat New York in all nine regular-season games at McNichols Arena before splitting the first two games of this series. If the Nuggets win Game Five, the teams will return to the Nassau Coliseum in Uniondale, N.Y., Thursday night for the sixth game.

The Nets, led by Julius Erving's 34 points and helped by John Williamson's 24, Brian Taylor's 23 and Jim Eakins' 17, whipped the Nuggets 121-112 Saturday night, moving within one victory of clinching their second league title in three years.

The loss was more one-sided than the score indicated — the Nets led by as many as 19 points before Denver closed the gap in the closing minutes. And it left the Nuggets — the only ABA team ever to win 60 games two seasons in a row — bewildered and questioning their own ability.

"I thought we lost our poise in the second half," said Brown. "We also took bad shots and turned the ball over without purpose. Our foul shooting was awful (20-for-35) and we had individual breakdowns all over the place. It was just a disaster. Once we broke down, there was just a lot of wishing and hoping."

"We didn't play very well defensively," said rookie star David Thompson, who scored 23 points. "We lacked a little concentration. But now that we're down 3-1, maybe we'll start concentrating more."

McBride placed on disabled list

ST. LOUIS (AP) — "It's exactly the same thing that happened a year ago," crestfallen Bake McBride said. "I'm the only one I know of who's had injuries like this."

The 27-year-old McBride, the National League's top rookie in 1974, was placed on baseball's 15-day disabled list Sunday by the St. Louis Cardinals following a shoulder injury he suffered the night before against the Houston Astros.

"I got it while I was hitting. I hit the ball foul before I walked," explained McBride, who was sidelined 23 days last year by a similar injury.

"This is the best start I've ever had," he added in respect to his .365 batting average, "but they say I won't even be able to swing a bat for a week to 10 days."

The Cards, who reactivated infielder Mike Tyson to take McBride's place on their 25-player roster, indicated Mike Anderson and Luis Melendez will alternate at McBride's center field position.

Because of the injury the Cards also retained 22-year-old infielder Doug Clarey, who was called up April 16 when Tyson went on the disabled list.

Boston and Phoenix gain NBA victories in conference finals

By The Associated Press

Welcome to the National Basketball Association playoffs, John Lambert!

Dave Cowens, the Boston Celtics' superstar, went to work on Lambert, a lightly-tested rookie, late in the fourth quarter Sunday and suddenly the Cleveland Cavaliers were out of the ball game. The Celtics wound up with a 94-89 victory and a 2-0 advantage in the best-of-seven Eastern Conference final series which resumes at Cleveland Tuesday night.

In the Western final, veteran Keith Erickson scored eight points in the second overtime to earn the Phoenix Suns a 133-129 triumph over the Golden State Warriors. Their series is tied at two games apiece with the next game set for Wednesday at Oakland.

Lambert, a 6-foot-10 No. 1 draft choice from Southern California who averaged six minutes a game during the regular season, entered the game when Cleveland center Nate Thurmond fouled out with 7:36 remaining. Thurmond was playing for Jim Chones, the Cavs' regular center who is sidelined with a broken toe.

Boston, which had led for the first time since early in the second period 74-73, then reeled off seven straight points for an 81-73 lead with Cowens hitting five points and feeding John Havlicek for the other two.

Jo Jo White, who led a third-quarter rally, paced Boston with 24 points. Havlicek added 20 points, Charlie Scott 16 and Cowens 15 while Paul Silas grabbed 20 rebounds. Dick Snyder and Bobby Smith each scored 16 points to top Cleveland.

Cleveland Coach Bill Fitch said, "This series is far from over. I think we can come back here even up. I haven't canceled any hotel reservations in Boston yet."

In the Western playoff, Erickson's goal put Phoenix into the first overtime with two seconds left in regulation play. Then Ricky Sobers scored two free throws for Phoenix with two seconds to play in the first overtime, sending the game into a second extra session.

Erickson, who led the Suns over Golden State with 28 points, said: "They were faling in. It was nice. It's now two out of three and we can beat them if we get hot for two games."

Gar Heard scored 22 points and had 18 ebounds for Phoenix. Paul Smith of defending champion Golden State led all scorers with 30 points. Rick Barry, who fouled out with 1:37 to go in the second overtime and played only eight minutes in the first half because of foul trouble, tallied 26 points for the Warriors.

Ken Lisko, 15, sophomore shortshop of Youngstown Cardinal Mooney High School, hit five consecutive home runs and had twelve RBI's in a 16-3 win over Boardman last Tuesday. The feat was a local and possibly a national record. (AP Wirephoto)

One rookie overshadows another as Indy 500 practice begins

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Any other year, Bobby Olivero would be drawing raves as an up-and-coming rookie with a highly promising future in championship automobile racing.

But this year, while the crowds flock to the Vollstedt garage just seven doors west of his own at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway, Olivero spends a lot of time waiting, trying not to get nervous.

The 29-year-old rookie, defending champion of the California Racing Association, has been upstaged by Janet Guthrie, another rookie and the first woman ever to enter the Indianapolis 500.

"She deserves a lot of attention," says Olivero. "She's doing a good job, so you have to expect that."

Almost overlooked amidst Miss Guthrie's history-making appearance was Olivero's own precedent-shattering accomplishment here: he is the first driver in history to pass the entire rookie test on the first day of practice.

Olivero looked so good in completing the first two phases Saturday, at 160 miles an hour, that U.S. Auto Club officials allowed him to finish the final two phases at 165.

"I had no idea I was the first ever to do that," he said. "I'm just glad we got it over."

Olivero has run his Eagle at 181 m.p.h. at Ontario Motor Speedway in California. "I just went as fast as I had to here to get through the tests. Now, we're going to try to work up speed until we get it to where we think it belongs."

Two months ago, he made his championship car debut, finishing 13th at Phoenix. His teammate, Bill Vukovich, the 1968 Indy rookie of the year, has predicted that Olivero will win that honor this time.

He has talked with Miss Guthrie, but not "rookie-to-rookie."

"It seems like she's pretty intelligent," he said. " I think she'll do a real good job here."

Miss Guthrie, however, was again thwarted in her attempt to get onto the track for the first time.

For the second day in a row, mechanical problems kept her racer in the garage until the closing minutes of practice, and her teammate, Dick Simon, managed just a few laps before the 6 p.m. finish.

On Saturday, a bad clutch hub kept the car in the garage most of the day. Then, when Simon finally took it out, an oil line broke. Sunday morning, Simon managed just two laps before coming in with a burned piston.

"That's racing," the 38-year-old Miss Guthrie shrugged. "I can't really say anything more than that."

The fastest of 18 drivers who did make it out was 1974 winner Johnny Rutherford, who posted a speed of 187.696 m.p.h.

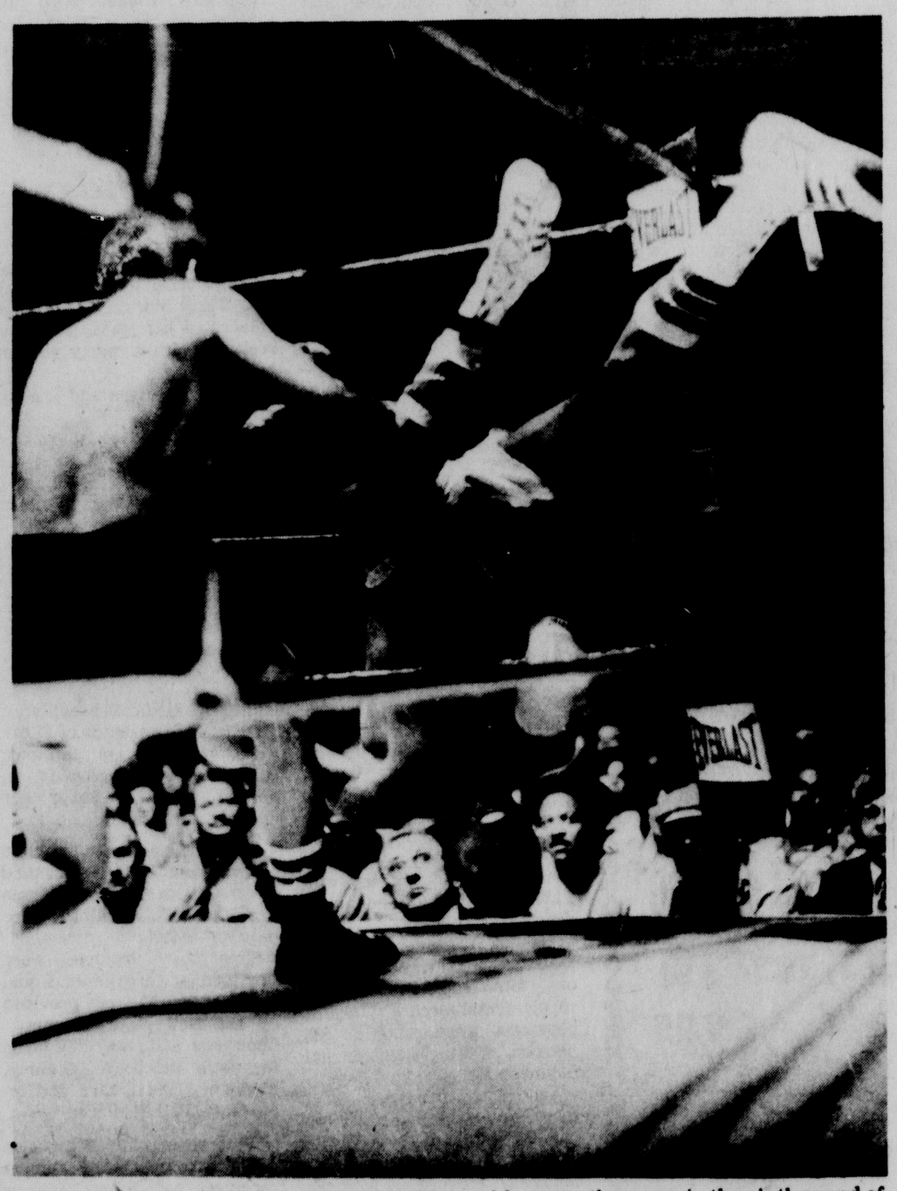

Three-time winner A.J. Foyt was just a shade slower at 187.266.

Five others who topped 180 were 1973 champion Gordon Johncock at 184.653, Tom Sneva at 184.2, 1969 winner Mario Andretti and Wally Dallenbach, both at 183.936, and Roger McCluskey at 180.144.

Daily practice continues through Friday, with qualifications next Saturday and Sunday, and again, on May 22-23.

The 60th running of the world's richest auto race will be on Sunday, May 30.

Canadiens take 1-0 lead

Indianapolis middleweight Sam NeSmith tumbles over the ropes in the sixth round of his bout with Raul Aguirre of Mexico Thursday night. NeSmith came back to score a TKO in the tenth round. (AP Wirephoto)

MONTREAL (AP) — Overtime approached. In less than two minutes, the Montreal Canadiens and Philadelphia Flyers would have completed the regulation three periods without deciding the opening game of their Stanley Cup final playoff series.

The crowd of 17,582 at the Forum had been driven to a frenzy as the Canadiens fell behind 2-0, came back to tie, then did the same after trailing 3-2.

"I yelled to him," said defenseman Guy Lapointe. "He got it over to me and I was going to pass but I couldn't see anyone to pass to" as the play crossed the Philadelphia blue line.

"So I figured I better shoot it," said Lapointe, who figured correctly. His 20-foot shot found the mark with 1:22 remaining and Montreal, the league's fastest slow-starting team, had a 4-3 triumph Sunday night.

It's just as well, according to Lapointe, that the extra session wasn't needed. "I don't like to play overtimes," he said. "It's tough on the stomach. One mistake, and all the guys feel like you let them down."

After just 21 seconds Sunday night, the fans were let down when Philadelphia's Reggie Leach scored his 16th goal of the playoffs to become the leading single-season netfinder in postseason history. Leach's record goal, eclipsing the mark of 15 set by Montreal's Yvan Cournoyer in 1973, was the only shot the Flyers managed in the game's first 10 minutes.

Some 12 minutes later, Ross Lonsberry backhanded a Mel Bridgman pass past Canadiens goalie Ken Dryden and the fans — who later would be cheering — were quiet.

Canadiens take 1-0 lead

MONTREAL (AP) — Overtime approached. In less than two minutes, the Montreal Canadiens and Philadelphia Flyers would have completed the regulation three periods without deciding the opening game of their Stanley Cup final playoff series.

The crowd of 17,582 at the Forum had been driven to a frenzy as the Canadiens fell behind 2-0, came back to tie, then did the same after trailing 3-2.

"I yelled to him," said defenseman Guy Lapointe. "He got it over to me and I was going to pass but I couldn't see anyone to pass to" as the play crossed the Philadelphia blue line.

"So I figured I better shoot it," said Lapointe, who figured correctly. His 20-foot shot found the mark with 1:22 remaining and Montreal, the league's fastest slow-starting team, had a 4-3 triumph Sunday night.

It's just as well, according to Lapointe, that the extra session wasn't needed. "I don't like to play overtimes," he said. "It's tough on the stomach. One mistake, and all the guys feel like you let them down."

After just 21 seconds Sunday night, the fans were let down when Philadelphia's Reggie Leach scored his 16th goal of the playoffs to become the leading single-season netfinder in postseason history. Leach's record goal, eclipsing the mark of 15 set by Montreal's Yvan Cournoyer in 1973, was the only shot the Flyers managed in the game's first 10 minutes.

Some 12 minutes later, Ross Lonsberry backhanded a Mel Bridgman pass past Canadiens goalie Ken Dryden and the fans — who later would be cheering — were quiet.

Morehouse-- All records for Southeast Missouri were broken on the Rauch and Griffin farm last week, when a purebred Duroc-Jersey sow became the mother of 19 fine pigs. Since the sow only had 12 teats the six-year-old son, Robert, is nursing the balance by hand. This sow had 13 pigs her first litter and this is her second litter. How many will she have next? Mr. Eubanks, who owns the sow, says he is expecting to beat the world records with her.

Mr. and Mrs. Craven Watkins and babies are moving to Lilbourn, where Craven is stationed with the State Highway Department in connection with the concrete road being laid to Risco and Malden.

The Bulldog tracksters emerged victors over Caruthersville High School in a dual track meet at that city Tuesday. The meet was a neck and neck affair from the start, the Bulldogs finally edging out by a 64½ to 58½ score. Jim Baker was the high point man of the meet with 18 points, winning the discus, high hurdles, tying for first in the high jump,and taking second in the shot. Ivan Randolph was second high man with 13, winning first in the pole vault, tying for first in the high jump, second in the broad jump, and third in the hundred.

Work on the buildings at the corner of Malone avenue and Kingshighway is progressing satisfactory and the roof joists are being placed. People passing know that Sikeston is growing by the business houses and residences that are going up.

Superintendent of Oran honored

ORAN— Fifty well-wishers — teachers, board members, and members of his family -- were present at a banquet April 24 in honor of the retiring superintendent of schools, M. V. Smith. The supper was held in the banquet room at Two-Tonys Smorgasbord in Sikeston.

Born Feb. 14, 1911, Smith grew up in Poplar Bluff, attending the public schools there. He received a bachelor of arts degree from the University of Missouri at Columbia and for a time attended medical school in Chicago.

Smith's job experience is quite varied. He has tried his hand at farming and was a punch-press operator for Century Electric.

A strike in 1937 forced him, at 26, to become a schoolteacher in a two-room school, instructing grades three through six. He went to Zalma to teach math and science in 1941 and was made principal later that same year upon the death of his predecessor.

He served as the superintendent at Zalma the following year, then moved to Delta from 1943 to 1947.

The school year of 1947-48 found Smith in a double position at Herrick, Ill., as the high school principal and elementary-superintendent. A succession of new, better-paying jobs followed, first at Neelyville five years, then Fisk for nine and Fredericktown for seven. His job immediately prior to his present five-year-old position at Oran was a two year term at Twin Rivers in the Fisk-Broseley area.

Among the changes Smith remembers throughout his career are the beginning of the school lunch program at Zalma and Neelyville's building improvements. At Fisk, a bond issue was passed bringing about a new high school gymnasium, cafeteria and classrooms.

Fredericktown saw several annexations and reorganization elections to form the present school district, and a large elemenary building was constructed after the passage of a bond issue.

At Oran, the change has not been quite so physical during Smith's stay as superintendent, but the district achieved a long hoped-for AA rating, and overall instruction has been improved. His remaining wish for Oran is that a new high school be built.

Smith and his wife Martha have three children. Mrs. Marvin (Beverly) Sikes teaches in the Fredericktowr elementary System and has a daughter, Heather. Son Brude is a professor and department head of biology at York College in York, Pa. He and wife Elizabeth have two children, Joe Bart and Susan. Mr. and Mrs. Mark Smith live at Poplar Bluff, where he works as a carpenter.

What's the law?

The case of the feminist cause

By JACK STRAUSS, LL.B.

Rose couldn't have believed more strongly in the feminist cause if she had "I Hate Housework" tattooed across her chest. Consequently, when she applied for adriver's license and was told that she had to apply in her legal name -- which, accordin to state law, meant using her husband's surname -- she reacted with something less than pleasure.

Whereupon Rose went to court, where she attacked the constitutionality of the state law in court.

"In the first place," she told the judge, "I'm me and not my husband. I can't be stripped of my individuality. In the second place, a woman is as good as any man. Therefore, any anti-feminist law that says I can't use my maiden name just isn't legal."

"It's not only legal," was the official response, "it's necessary. If a person could use any name he or she chose, you'd need a Sherlock Holmes to figure out who's who. The problems of identification would be unbelieveable."

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you invalidate the "anti-feminist" state law?

This is how the judge ruled: NO! The judge held that all states recognize the common law rule that when a woman marries, her husband's surname becomes her legal name. It is steeped in tradition and allows for uniformity among the states which is sufficiently important to overcome a claim or discrimination. As applied to this case, continued the judge, requiring applicants to use their legal name when applying for driver's licenses enables a state to keep a closer watch over its licensees without confusion as to identities. If a woman really wants to use her maiden name, concluded the judge, in effect, she may do so, where state law allows, by going to court and changing her name legally.

Dr. Lamb

Calorie data isn't right

By Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I am on a 1,000-calorie a day diet. I found it necessary to take hamburger off my menu because it contains 100 calories an ounce. In the store I have noticed hamburger marked lean and extra lean. I wonder whether this type of hamburger would contain the same amount of calories per ounce as regular hamburger since most of the fat drains away, or whether it would contain fewer calories. Could you give me an estimate of the calories per ounce in extra lean hamburger?

DEAR READER — I sometimes think that 90 per cent of the food value information available to people must be wrong. At least it certainly isn't consistent with the values from the U. S. Department of Agriculture. Regular ground raw hamburger contains only 76 calories per ounce. Cooked hamburger (cooked weight) contains only 82 calories per ounce. Remember the cooked weight not only has fat drained away from it, but the cooking process also eliminates water that is present in raw meat. Lean hamburger, raw, contains 51 calories per ounce and cooked, 63 calories per ounce.

The number of calories per ounce in hamburger certainly is dependent upon the amount of fat that's ground with it. If you want to have hamburger meat that's lean you can get round steak or even a good lean roast and cut away all the fat. The separable lean of round steak contains only 39 calories per ounce raw and only 54 calories per ounce cooked (broiled).

People who like hamburger and want to get rid of the fat because they are on a calorie restricted diet can grind their own lean meat, season it with any number of the meat sauces and broil it. This keeps it from being dry and still gives you a high protein meat patty. You can cook the unground separable lean of round steak the same way.

So much for your hamburger problem. My question is why are you on a 1,000-calorie diet? That is a greater restriction than most men should be on, and I think it's a greater restriction even than most small women should be on. The sensible way to lose weight is gradually.

Crash diets are dreadful. At the beginning of a diet you may lose a lot of water and empty out the digestive tract. This five to six pound loss the first week is not fat. The purpose of a diet is to get rid of body fat.

After the initial first week a sensible diet should result in about one pound of fat loss a week. Certainly no more than two pounds.

One purpose of dieting is to learn how to eat properly. You might as well adjust your eating habits with a good balanced diet to start with. That way you can stay slim once you have achieved your goal rather than having the yo-yo effect of being fat and slim, fat and slim, dried out from loss of body water by using crash diet fads and then rehydrated with water again when you get off the diet.

For more information on sensible dieting send 50 cents for The Health Letter, number 4-7, Weight Losing Diet. Send a long-stamped, self-addressed envelope for mailing. Address your letter to me in care of this newspaper, P. O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

US Postal employes to walk across lawns

BELLEVILLE, Ill. (AP) — Neither rain nor sleet nor snow nor grass shall keep the mailman from his appointed rounds in this southern Illinois city.

Grass?

That's the new obstacle mailmen are to conquer here under a U.S. Postal Service experiment beginning today that requires mailmen to walk across residents' lawns to speed up delivery.

Mail carriers have been ordered to take the shortest route in going house to house, cutting across lawns unless customers file an objection with the post office.

Results of the experiment will be studied by investigators in the Methods Improvement Plan and Standard Operating Procedures (MIPSOP) program to determine if time can be saved on various routes.

Should the system prove successful, Postmaster Eugene Brauer said, it could be implemented nationwide.

To many of the city's 84 full-time and 14 part-time carriers, the plan is an effort to eliminate letter carrier routes and reduce the work force.

Harold Wright, president of the local chapter of the National Association of Letter Carriers, said he would file a class-action grievance on behalf of the carriers to have the order rescinded.

Morehouse PTO elects new officers

MOREHOUSE— The Morehouse Parent-Teachers Organization elected officers for the coming year and was entertained by two elementary school classes during an April 26 meeting at the school cafeteria.

Janey Kindle was chosen PTO president, with Wanda Dillard elected vice president; Virginia King, secretary; and Dianna Lafferty, treasurer.

Entertainment was provided by the third grade classes of Mrs. Grace Schuchart and Sharon Gunn, who presented a musical program under the direction of Doyle Brown.

The group heard recitation of poems by Mrs. Jean Schumacher's first grade students, who also won the room count.

Cub Scout Pack 49 conducted a flag ceremony and presented the school with a model of Ft. Freedom which the Pack had constructed as part of its Bicentennial activities.

The PTO members voted to conduct a bakesale May 26 at Kingsway Plaza Mall in Sikeston to raise funds for erecting a fence around the front of the school building.

Morehouse-- All records for Southeast Missouri were broken on the Rauch and Griffin farm last week, when a purebred Duroc-Jersey sow became the mother of 19 fine pigs. Since the sow only had 12 teats the six-year-old son, Robert, is nursing the balance by hand. This sow had 13 pigs her first litter and this is her second litter. How many will she have next? Mr. Eubanks, who owns the sow, says he is expecting to beat the world records with her.

Mr. and Mrs. Craven Watkins and babies are moving to Lilbourn, where Craven is stationed with the State Highway Department in connection with the concrete road being laid to Risco and Malden.

The Bulldog tracksters emerged victors over Caruthersville High School in a dual track meet at that city Tuesday. The meet was a neck and neck affair from the start, the Bulldogs finally edging out by a 64½ to 58½ score. Jim Baker was the high point man of the meet with 18 points, winning the discus, high hurdles, tying for first in the high jump,and taking second in the shot. Ivan Randolph was second high man with 13, winning first in the pole vault, tying for first in the high jump, second in the broad jump, and third in the hundred.

Work on the buildings at the corner of Malone avenue and Kingshighway is progressing satisfactory and the roof joists are being placed. People passing know that Sikeston is growing by the business houses and residences that are going up.

Superintendent of Oran honored

ORAN— Fifty well-wishers — teachers, board members, and members of his family -- were present at a banquet April 24 in honor of the retiring superintendent of schools, M. V. Smith. The supper was held in the banquet room at Two-Tonys Smorgasbord in Sikeston.

Born Feb. 14, 1911, Smith grew up in Poplar Bluff, attending the public schools there. He received a bachelor of arts degree from the University of Missouri at Columbia and for a time attended medical school in Chicago.

Smith's job experience is quite varied. He has tried his hand at farming and was a punch-press operator for Century Electric.

A strike in 1937 forced him, at 26, to become a schoolteacher in a two-room school, instructing grades three through six. He went to Zalma to teach math and science in 1941 and was made principal later that same year upon the death of his predecessor.

He served as the superintendent at Zalma the following year, then moved to Delta from 1943 to 1947.

The school year of 1947-48 found Smith in a double position at Herrick, Ill., as the high school principal and elementary-superintendent. A succession of new, better-paying jobs followed, first at Neelyville five years, then Fisk for nine and Fredericktown for seven. His job immediately prior to his present five-year-old position at Oran was a two year term at Twin Rivers in the Fisk-Broseley area.

Among the changes Smith remembers throughout his career are the beginning of the school lunch program at Zalma and Neelyville's building improvements. At Fisk, a bond issue was passed bringing about a new high school gymnasium, cafeteria and classrooms.

Fredericktown saw several annexations and reorganization elections to form the present school district, and a large elemenary building was constructed after the passage of a bond issue.

At Oran, the change has not been quite so physical during Smith's stay as superintendent, but the district achieved a long hoped-for AA rating, and overall instruction has been improved. His remaining wish for Oran is that a new high school be built.

Smith and his wife Martha have three children. Mrs. Marvin (Beverly) Sikes teaches in the Fredericktown elementary System and has a daughter, Heather. Son Brude is a professor and department head of biology at York College in York, Pa. He and wife Elizabeth have two children, Joe Bart and Susan. Mr. and Mrs. Mark Smith live at Poplar Bluff, where he works as a carpenter.

What's the law?

The case of the feminist cause

By JACK STRAUSS, LL.B.

Rose couldn't have believed more strongly in the feminist cause if she had "I Hate Housework" tattooed across her chest. Consequently, when she applied for adriver's license and was told that she had to apply in her legal name -- which, accordin to state law, meant using her husband's surname -- she reacted with something less than pleasure.

Whereupon Rose went to court, where she attacked the constitutionality of the state law in court.

"In the first place," she told the judge, "I'm me and not my husband. I can't be stripped of my individuality. In the second place, a woman is as good as any man. Therefore, any anti-feminist law that says I can't use my maiden name just isn't legal."

"It's not only legal," was the official response, "it's necessary. If a person could use any name he or she chose, you'd need a Sherlock Holmes to figure out who's who. The problems of identification would be unbelieveable."

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you invalidate the "anti-feminist" state law?

This is how the judge ruled: NO! The judge held that all states recognize the common law rule that when a woman marries, her husband's surname becomes her legal name. It is steeped in tradition and allows for uniformity among the states which is sufficiently important to overcome a claim or discrimination. As applied to this case, continued the judge, requiring applicants to use their legal name when applying for driver's licenses enables a state to keep a closer watch over its licensees without confusion as to identities. If a woman really wants to use her maiden name, concluded the judge, in effect, she may do so, where state law allows, by going to court and changing her name legally.

The Prayer

"The Lord is good, a stronghold in the day of trouble; he knows those who take refuge in him." (Nahum 1:7, RSV)

PRAYER: Lord, give us wisdom to understand that only Thy love and Thy power are our refuge, security, and hope. In Jesus' name. Amen.

Dr. Lamb

Calorie data isn't right

By Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I am on a 1,000-calorie a day diet. I found it necessary to take hamburger off my menu because it contains 100 calories an ounce. In the store I have noticed hamburger marked lean and extra lean. I wonder whether this type of hamburger would contain the same amount of calories per ounce as regular hamburger since most of the fat drains away, or whether it would contain fewer calories. Could you give me an estimate of the calories per ounce in extra lean hamburger?

DEAR READER — I sometimes think that 90 per cent of the food value information available to people must be wrong. At least it certainly isn't consistent with the values from the U. S. Department of Agriculture. Regular ground raw hamburger contains only 76 calories per ounce. Cooked hamburger (cooked weight) contains only 82 calories per ounce. Remember the cooked weight not only has fat drained away from it, but the cooking process also eliminates water that is present in raw meat. Lean hamburger, raw, contains 51 calories per ounce and cooked, 63 calories per ounce.

The number of calories per ounce in hamburger certainly is dependent upon the amount of fat that's ground with it. If you want to have hamburger meat that's lean you can get round steak or even a good lean roast and cut away all the fat. The separable lean of round steak contains only 39 calories per ounce raw and only 54 calories per ounce cooked (broiled).

People who like hamburger and want to get rid of the fat because they are on a calorie restricted diet can grind their own lean meat, season it with any number of the meat sauces and broil it. This keeps it from being dry and still gives you a high protein meat patty. You can cook the ground separable lean of round steak the same way.

So much for your hamburger problem. My question is why are you on a 1,000-calorie diet? That is a greater restriction than most men should be on, and I think it's a greater restriction even than most small women should be on. The sensible way to lose weight is gradually.

Crash diets are dreadful. At the beginning of a diet you may lose a lot of water and empty out the digestive tract. This five to six pound loss the first week is not fat. The purpose of a diet is to get rid of body fat.

After the initial first week a sensible diet should result in about one pound of fat loss a week. Certainly no more than two pounds.

One purpose of dieting is to learn how to eat properly. You might as well adjust your eating habits with a good balanced diet to start with. That way you can stay slim once you have achieved your goal rather than having the yo-yo effect of being fat and slim, fat and slim, dried out from loss of body water by using crash diet fads and then rehydrated with water again when you get off the diet.

For more information on sensible dieting send 50 cents for The Health Letter, number 4-7, Weight Losing Diet. Send a long-stamped, self-addressed envelope for mailing. Address your letter to me in care of this newspaper, P. O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

US Postal employes to walk across lawns

Grass?

That's the new obstacle mailmen are to conquer here under a U.S. Postal Service experiment beginning today that requires mailmen to walk across residents' lawns to speed up delivery.

Mail carriers have been ordered to take the shortest route — in going house to house, cutting across lawns unless customers file an objection with the post office.

Results of the experiment will be studied by investigators in the Methods Improvement Plan and Standard Operating Procedures (MIPSOP) program to determine if time can be saved on various routes.

Should the system prove successful, Postmaster Eugene Brauer said, it could be implemented nationwide.

To many of the city's 84 full-time and 14 part-time carriers, the plan is an effort to eliminate letter carrier routes and reduce the work force.

Harold Wright, president of the local chapter of the National Association of Letter Carriers, said he would file a class-action grievance on behalf of the carriers to have the order rescinded.

Morehouse PTO elects new officers

MOREHOUSE— The Morehouse Parent-Teachers Organization elected officers for the coming year and was entertained by two elementary school classes during an April 26 meeting at the school cafeteria.

Janey Kindle was chosen PTO president, with Wanda Dillard elected vice president; Virginia King, secretary; and Dianna Lafferty, treasurer.

Entertainment was provided by the third grade classes of Mrs. Grace Schuchart and Sharon Gunn, who presented a musical program under the direction of Doyle Brown.

The group heard recitation of poems by Mrs. Jean Schumacher's first grade students, who also won the room count.

Cub Scout Pack 49 conducted a flag ceremony and presented the school with a model of Ft. Freedom which the Pack had constructed as part of its Bicentennial activities.

The PTO members voted to conduct a bakesale May 26 at Kingsway Plaza Mall in Sikeston to raise funds for erecting a fence around the front of the school building.

Today in U.S. history

By The Associated Press

Today is Monday, May 10, the 131st day of 1976. There are 235 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On this date in 1775, Ethan Allen and a company of Vermont militiamen — the Green Mountain Boys — captured Fort Ticonderoga, N.Y. from the surprised British.

On this date:

In 1497, the Italian navigator Amerigo Vespucci sailed on his first voyage to the New World.

In 1865, during the Civil War, Union forces captured Confederate President Jefferson Davis at Irwinville, Ga.

In 1869, a golden spike was driven at Ogden, Utah, marking the completion of the first transcontinental railroad.

In 1871, the Treaty of Frankfurt ended the Franco-Prussian War, with Alsace-Lorraine ceded to Germany

In 1940, during World War II, German forces invaded Belgium, Holland and Luxembourg.

In 1970, the head of the United Auto Workers Union, Walter Reuther, and five others were killed in a plane crash in Michigan.

Ten years ago: Communist China released pictures of Chairman Mao Tse-tung to try to quell reports that the 72-year-old leader was seriously ill.

Five years ago: Former Nazi Rudolf Hess had wound up 30 years behind bars, with the Soviets insisting that he serve a full life term in Berlin's Spandau Prison.

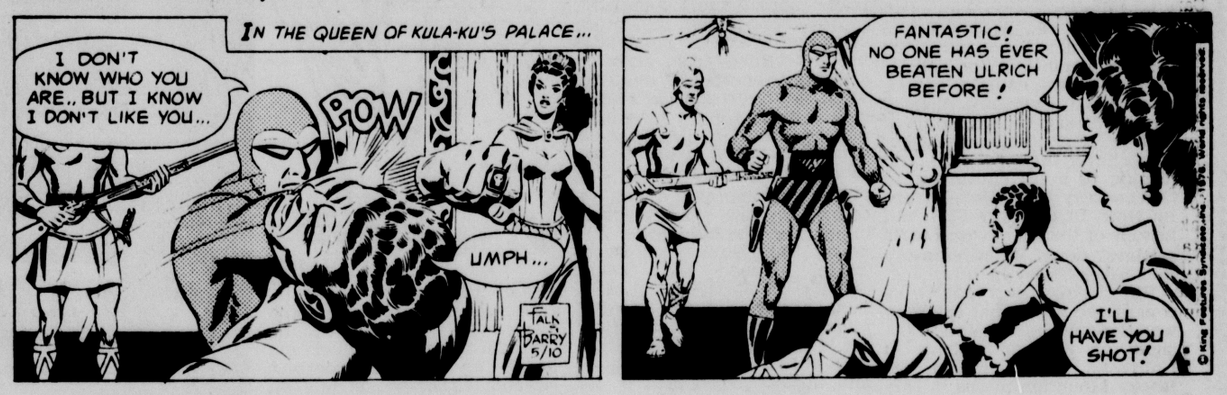

One year ago: The first television broadcasts were permitted in South Africa.

Today's birthdays: Fred Astaire is 77. Comedienne Nancy Walker is 54.

Something's Eating The Grasshopper

"Eaten out by grasshoppers — going back East."

This was the grim message frequently seen on settlers' wagons leaving Nebraska in the 1870's.

Now, a century later, grasshoppers are still taking a big chunk out of farm crops — particularly in the western states. Last year in South Dakota, for example, they cost farmers more than $4 million in terms of yield losses and control costs. Alfalfa was the state's hardest hit crop, but heavy damage also was inflicted on corn, wheat, and sunflower plantings.

Entomologists at the state's agricultural experiment station look for heavy damage again this year if dry weather continues.

Although serious outbreaks seldom occur in the eastern states, grasshoppers are still numerous enough in these areas to cause some crop damage each year. And while they seem to relish cereal crops and forage the most, the National Cotton Council points out that grasshoppers — even in small numbers — can greatly reduce cotton yields by cutting the seedlings and later the bolls.

Sometimes called locusts, these greedy pests have plagued mankind since the beginning of history. At one time or another, they have brought fear and famine to every continent. In this country, they injured crops in New England in 1797 and hordes of them destroyed early settlers' crops in Minnesota's Red River Valley in 1818.

But the first outbreak to be considered a national calamity was the one which inspired the signs on settlers' wagons in Nebraska. It began in the Rocky Mountain plains in 1874 and, over the next three years, great swarms of grasshoppers migrated from Montana, Wyoming, and Colorado to Texas and the Mississippi Valley — devouring crops wherever they paused in flight.

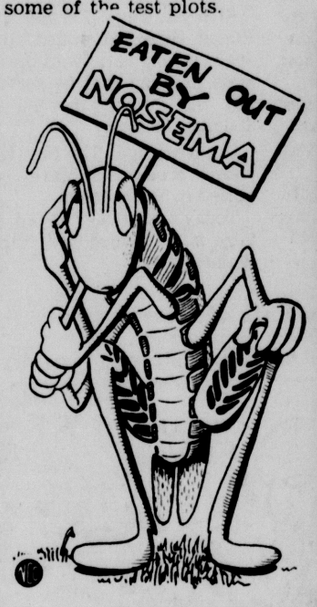

So serious was the grasshopper problem that Congress in 1877 created a commission to study it.

Some eight years later, an agricultural scientist in California came up with the idea of controlling the pest with a poisonous bait made by mixing arsenic, sugar, and water with wheat bran. In attempts to make the bait more appetizing to grasshoppers and thus more effective, scientists tried adding everything from beer to soap. But the original mixture, while failing to provide a sure-cure remedy for the grasshopper, continued to be the most commonly used control for more than half a century.

Chemical sprays began to come into use against grasshoppers in the late 1940's, but now — with many of the insecticides banned and others proving too costly and impractical because of the insects' migration habits — scientists are looking at new approaches.

One of the most promising — and biggest experiment of its kind to date — is now underway on 92,000 grasshopper-infested acres in Montana. Researchers there are turning a natural parasitic enemy — called "Nosema locustae" — against hoppers, and it could mark a new era in grasshopper control. In localized spots, the parasite often kills up to 90 percent of the grasshoppers it comes into contact with. The infected hoppers won't lay eggs, can't fly very far, and soon die.

Wheat bran flakes coated with the parasites already have been dropped by plane over some 46,000 acres. Initial results — even better than researchers expected — show a 70-75 percent infection rate on some of the test plots.

Over the next three years, grasshopper population in the treated fields should decline dramatically. New hoppers entering the area will contract Nosema either by feeding on dead hoppers or from spores left in the grass from previous years' cadavers. Scientists think it may be 10 years before a new application of Nosema is needed on the fields.

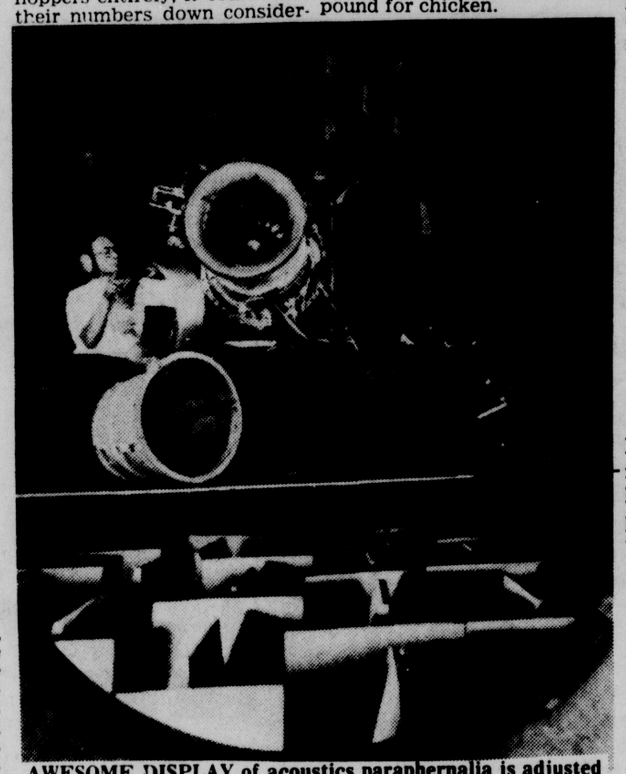

Among other advantages of the new treatment: it attacks only grasshoppers and a few species of rangeland crickets, it's safe for humans, and costs only about one-fourth as much as currently used insecticides.

If the project proves as successful as indicated, it could have worldwide potential since Nosema can be applied to fields with standard application equipment.

While scientists say the treatment wouldn't eliminate grasshoppers entirely, it could hold their numbers down considerably. If it does, grasshopper colonies might one day be marked. "Eaten out by Nosema — population declining."

Sobering Thought

According to a recent price study, if a farmer were able to set the price he receives for his produce on the basis of cost, increases for other goods and services, you'd be paying $4.05 a pound for ground beef, $3.28 a dozen for eggs, and $3.10 a pound for chicken.

AWESOME DISPLAY of acoustics paraphernalia is adjusted by an engineer at General Electric's research facilities in Schenectady where GE continues development of considerably quieter jet engines expected to be available by the 1980s.

Psychologist Says Young People Need Someone To Listen To Them

LITCHFIELD, Conn. (AP) — You can benefit from a crisis if you comprehend its significance, and it can help you grow, says Dr. Renee Nell, director of a therapy center where she works with young adults.

Growing up for her was one crisis after another, admits the 65-year-old head of The Country Place here, who considers the phrase, "it can't be done," a challenge rather than a deterrent.

Escaping penniless from Berlin to Switzerland in 1938 — two steps ahead of the Nazis — studying at the University of Zurich, UCLA, the New School and Columbia University, where she received her doctorate, she battled "it can't be done" all the way.

It was her background in Germany, where "growing up was a painful experience," that led her to choose psychology as a career.

"As an adolescent, the loneliness was frightful," recalls the auburn-haired motherly-looking Dr. Nell. "You hoped for an adult to talk to, who could help to overcome some of these problems, but there was no one to talk to.

"In Germany, adolescents were required to be quiet, toe the line and work, with no questions asked. I resolved that when I grew up, I would learn about young people, and help them to break through the barriers of fear, loneliness and personal development."

She was as good as her word, becoming the first woman to work with youthful offenders in New York's Youth House who had never had a female to talk to before she came on the scene.

Her work with her private patients, including young adults dependent on drugs and alcohol, convinced her of the need for a therapeutic community providing a total environment in a relaxed bucolic atmosphere.

DR. RENEE NELL

Finding it necessary to get away from the city to renew herself on weekends, the psychologist located a little cottage in rural Connecticut and decided to see if working in the fresh air, close to nature, could help some of her most withdrawn patients.

"I started taking one or two of the most disturbed out with me for the weekend," she says, "and found that invariably they responded to working with nature by forgetting their own fears, and becoming less lonely and depressed. It was easier to work through their problems with them."

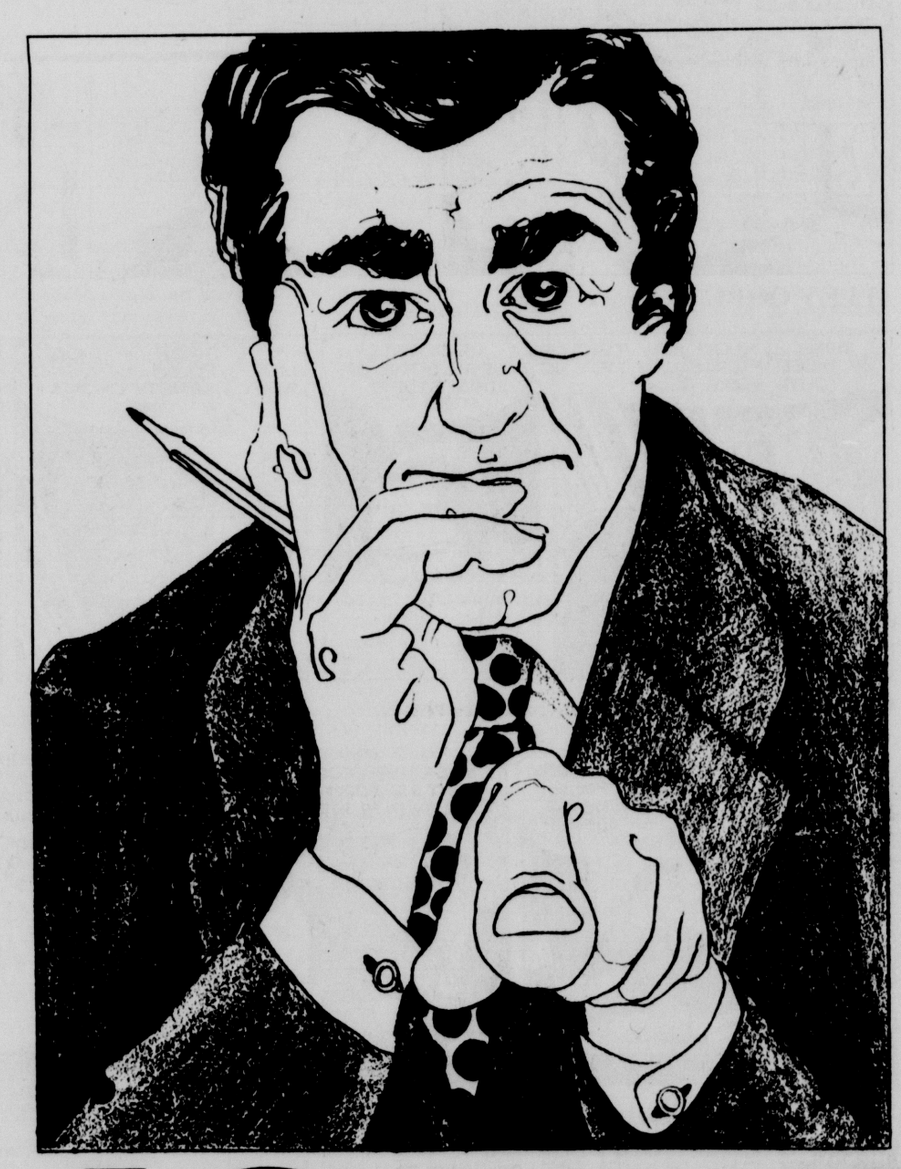

Eventually, in 1966, she conceived the plan for an open country residence where emotionally disturbed young adults could be helped to reconstruct their personalities through self-confrontation and by relating, at their own pace, to the therapists and other patients.

"In this center," she explains, "emotionally disturbed residents and therapists live side by side, 24 hours a day. Everyone is on a first name basis, including myself. Patients may see their records or sit in on therapists' conferences on their cases. The key here is openness."

The residents have various work assignments. "Unlike occupational therapy, these jobs actually contribute to the upkeep of The Country Place," Dr. Nell points out. "Residents are justifiably proud of their efforts and, in turn, working with others helps to develop their interpersonal and communications skills."

Dr. Nell, who studied Jungian psychology with its founder, Carl Jung, at the University of Zurich, has done extensive work in dream interpretation. Her latest book, "Use of Dreams in Marriage Counseling," written in German, will be published in Germany next fall.

NEW GIRL ON CAMPUS always gets an eye, but in this case the campus is West Point and the attention-getter is the uniform model Jane Thacker is wearing. Overcoat, beret and boots will be the cold-weather full dress for the 80 to 100 women cadets expected in 1976, ending the U.S. Military Academy's 174-year-old men-only tradition.

TOUGH STANCE taken by President Frank E. Fitzsimmons and union negotiators resulted in strike-settling contract proposals that would protect Teamsters against inflation and increase wages and benefits 30 per cent over three years.

POSTMASTER General Benjamin F. Bailar warns the worst may be yet to come in Postal Service cuts. The mails are caught in a "vicious" economic spiral that could destroy services unless additional cutbacks are made, he forecasts.

FRED HARRIS, among Democratic also-rans in the New England primaries, believes his populist-oriented presidential campaign can withstand early voting setbacks.

NEW GIRL ON CAMPUS always gets an eye, but in this case the campus is West Point and the attention-getter is the uniform model Jane Thacker is wearing. Overcoat, beret and boots will be the cold-weather full dress for the 80 to 100 women cadets expected in 1976, ending the U.S. Military Academy's 174-year-old men-only tradition.

TOUGH STANCE taken by President Frank E. Fitzsimmons and union negotiators resulted in strike-settling contract proposals that would protect Teamsters against inflation and increase wages and benefits 30 per cent over thre · years.

POSTMASTER General Benjamin F. Bailar warns the worst may be yet to come in Postal Service cuts. The mails are caught in a "vicious" economic spiral that could destroy services unless additional eutbacks are made, he forecasts.

Ford predicts he will win a first ballot nomination

KANSAS CITY (AP) — President Ford still predicts that he will win the Republican presidential nomination at the Kansas City national convention on the first ballot, but admits Ronald Reagan has made that more difficult.

The President's prediction and admission came in an interview by the Kansas City Star during his Saturday campaign stop in Independence, Mo., the hometown of Harry S. Truman, where Ford unveiled a statue of the 33rd president.

The last four primaries haven't gone his way, Ford said, and he characterized Reagan as "an attractive and articulate" candidate who has seized public interest on "several very emotional issues."

As for the Reagan forecast of a first-ballot nomination, the President said, "We don't think that is a legitimate claim. We expect to win. But, to be realistic, they've done better in the last week than we anticipated."

Ford also said he believes both Reagan and Jimmy Carter, the frontrunner for the Democratic presidential nomination, have capitalized on public disenchantment with big government.

"In both cases," he said, "I don't think either one of them has presented any solution."

The President also:

—Said the divisiveness precipitated by the campaign could "be the end of the Republican party."

—Assured farmers of the unlikelihood of new embargoes on farm exports. Beef producers, he promised, will be protected from heavy importation of foreign beef, and ruled out beef price ceilings that have distressed the industry since 1973.

—Said he authorized Secretary of State Henry Kissinger's controversial speech on Rhodesia. The U.S. policy on Africa, he said, is predicated on self-determination and majority rule.

—Warned that the current debate over the Panama Canal could have an adverse effect on our relations with Latin America which, he said, believes a new settlement should be negotiated with Panama.

—Said he has alerted European leaders to the possibility that Communist-oriented governments could become members of NATO because of the rise of communism in Western Europe.

—Expressed doubt of a turn to isolationism in this country because of its adversities in Vietnam and with the United Nations.

Before engaging someone to write a critique on a symphony concert, PLEASE find someone who has something useful to say.

First of all, the person writing this article did not even know who the composer of the main piece played was — Tschaikowsky was mentioned several times. Tschaikowsky was not even on the program! Law agency is criticized in an independent study

WASHINGTON (AP) — An independent study of the federal Law Enforcement Assistance Administration concludes the agency has performed poorly in its $4.4-billion effort to combat crime and should be abolished.

"LEAA is unclear as to its mission, and what it has attempted it has done poorly," the study concluded. It urged Congress to shut down the LEAA and shift part of its funds to general revenue sharing.

The study was most critical of a $160-million LEAA "high impact anti-crime" program launched by the Nixon administration in 1972.

In announcing the administration's "high impact" project, former Vice President Spiro T. Agnew heralded the plan as an "across-the-board attack on street crimes and burglaries" in eight major cities.

But the report by the private Center for National Security Studies said the "high impact" project succeeded only in generating mountains of red tape and has had no significant effect on crime statistics.

The report by the non-profit research group is to be issued later, but a draft copy was obtained by The Associated Press. Entitled Law and Disorder IV, the study is the fourth in a series of highly critical examinations of LEAA directed by Sarah C. Carey, a Washington attorney.

In urging Congress to dissolve the LEAA, the report said, "The federal government has greatly increased its expenditures to combat crime, but these expenditures have had no effect in reducing crime.

"Not only has the LEAA ... failed to halt the rising crime rates, but (LEAA) administrators haven't yet determined the steps or procedures that can be taken to achieve that goal," it said.

Labor unrest felt nationwide

Cable cars are rolling again in San Francisco and beer is brewing once more at a Budweiser plant in New Jersey, but building service workers are still picketing in New York and 60,000 union rubber workers remain idled by a natiowide strike.

In San Francisco, an impromptu champagne party celebrating the end of the 38-day strike was held aboard the first cable car to restore service on Nob Hill.

About 1,800 city building trade workers struck on March 31 over a proposed $5.7-million pay cut. The 1,900 municipal railway workers honored the picket lines, idling the system's more than 1,000 buses, trollies, streetcars and cable cars.

The strike ended early Saturday when labor and city officials reached a compromise agreement to turn the issue of pay cuts over to an 11-member committee to recommend a solution. The recommendations, however, are not binding.

About 2,000 acres of San Francisco grass need mowing, 8,000 to 10,000 trees need watering, and 150 to 200 leaks in the city's water system need repair, city officials said.

The Anheiser Busch strike in Newark, N.J., ended Saturday when members of Teamsters Local 102 accepted a three-year contract. Details of the pact were not disclosed. About 150 machinists, clerical workers and nurses struck the Newark brewery March 1, and their picket lines were honored by about 1,000 other employes.

About 7,000 Budweiser employes in eight other cities remain on strike.

A tentative agreement was reached early Saturday in the five-week strike of 1,700 technicians and newswriters at the National Broadcasting Co., where salaries now average about $374 a week.

Terms of the proposed contract were not disclosed pending a ratification vote by the striking members of the National Association of Broadcast Employes and Technicians (NABET) in New York, Washington, Cleveland, Chicago, Los Angeles and San Francoisco.

Voting was expected to be completed by Wednesday and, if approved, the strikers will return to work by next Saturday, the network said. The walkout resulted from economic provisions and working conditions.

In New York, 20,000 members of Local 32-B of the Service Employes International Union continued their week-old strike of apartment buildings. The doormen, porters, elevator operators and security guards are seeking a $50-a-week raise and a one-year contract. Current salaries range from $180 to $201 a week.

The walkout by 60,000 members of the United Rubber Workers Union goes into its fourth week on Tuesday against the Big Four of the rubber industry — Goodyear, Goodrich, Firestone and Uniroyal.

The principal issues of the strike are salaries and cost-of-living clauses. Talks between the union and Firestone officials resume Monday in Cleveland.

Elsewhere in the Midwest, talks were to resume in Arlington Heights, Ill., on Monday as the 13-state strike by 14,000 Teamster drivers, loaders and sorters against United Parcel Service enters its 10th day. A union official indicated that only contract language disputes and seniority issues remain to be settled.

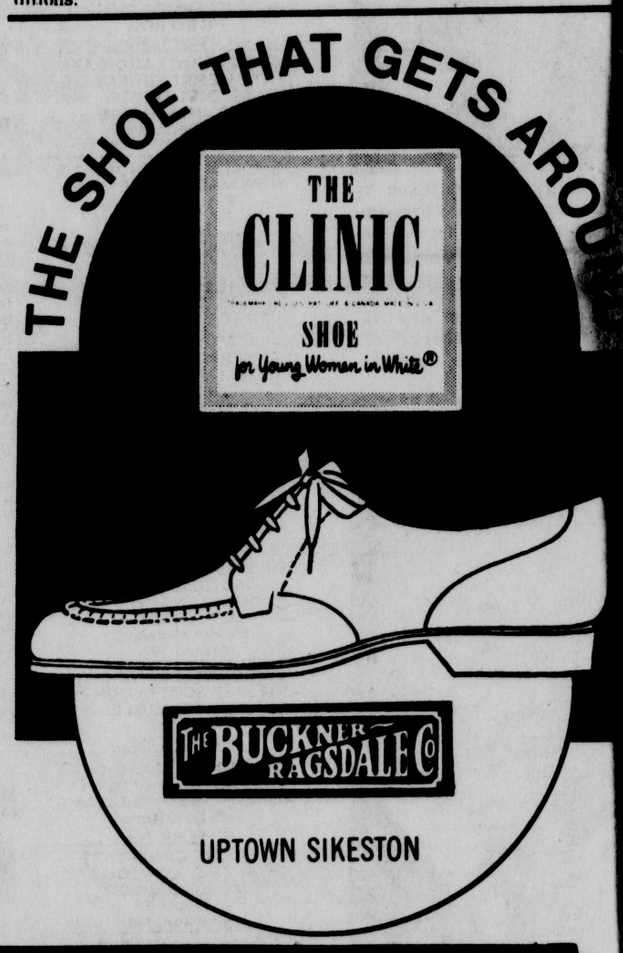

Fight ends with stabbing

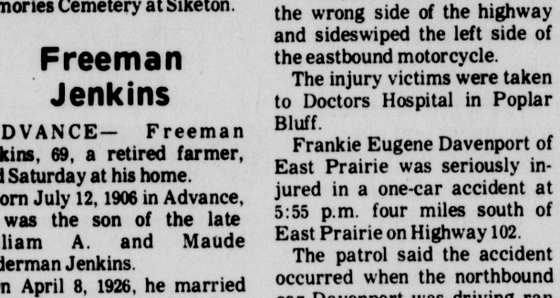

CHARLESTON— A fight Friday morning between two Negro girls -- one a juvenile -- at Charleston High School resulted in a stabbing according to Charleston police.

Glenda Carthell, 17, of Charleston Route Three was admitted to Missouri Delta Community Hospital in Sikeston, reportedly for surgery, following the stabbing in which she received a deep cut in her left hand inflicted by a butcher knife.

Police said the incident occurred at 9:10 a.m. in the school commons during a class period change. Two teachers witnessed the fight. One of the teachers told police he saw the knife in the hand of the juvenile and attempted to get it but could not prevent the stabbing. Another teacher then separated the girls and took the knife from the 16-year-old.

Police said an investigation is continuing and the juvenile is in custody of Juvenile Officer Gordon Galemore.
